

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

II.—THE INTER-COLONIAL COUNCIL OF
THE TRANSVAAL AND THE ORANGE RIVER COLONY.

During the war the railway systems of the Transvaal and the Orange River Colony were taken over by the Commander-in-Chief, and worked by him as part of the military organisation; and when peace followed, and both railways were handed over to the civil authorities, they continued to be worked as one system. By the Inter-Colonial Council South Africa Order-in-Council, 1903, there was constituted a joint body, described as an Inter-Colonial Council, to advise the High Commissioner :—

- (a) On the financial administration of the joint railway system now known as the Central South African Railways and on the employment of the railway revenue.
- (b) On the financial administration of the South African Constabulary; and
- (c) On certain other specified services common to the two colonies.

The Council was to consist of the Governor, Lieutenant-Governors, the heads of the railways and the constabulary, and ten members, of whom four were elected by the official members of the legislative councils.

It was to receive the net profits of the railways and any other revenues, which the respective legislative councils might, with the consent of the Secretary of State, devote to common expenditure, and also such portions of the guaranteed loan as the Governor should hand over to it for certain specified objects. For the latter purpose the railway assets were made a part of the assets of the Transvaal for the purpose of securing the principal, interest and sinking fund of the loan; and the Council, before dealing in any way with the net railway profits, was to pay to the Lieutenant-Governor of the Transvaal, the amounts required for interest and sinking fund. The Council's constitution and functions have been varied in points of detail by subsequent orders-in-council. In 1904 its membership was increased. In 1905 it was empowered to authorise new railway construction in either Colony, and the colonial governments were required to take all the necessary steps, by legislation and otherwise, to give effect to its arrangements. The Council was also entrusted with the gross receipts of the railway system instead of only the net profits as in the original order. It was required to prepare every year a budget of its revenue and expenditure, the revenue consisting almost entirely of the railway receipts, the expenditure consisting of the ordinary railway working expenditure, the loan services, the cost of the South African Constabulary and of the Governor's office, and the charges on account of certain minor services common to both colonies. Any deficiency was to be made good by contributions from the two colonies, apportioned between them in a ratio approved by the Secretary of State. In practice the deficiency was shared in proportion to the amounts of their respective customs revenues. Besides the annual budget of revenue and expenditure, the Inter-Colonial Council was responsible for the expenditure of the proceeds of the guaranteed loan, which had been made over to it by the Lieutenant-Governor of the Transvaal.

The establishment of responsible government in the Transvaal necessitated certain changes in the constitution of the Inter-Colonial Council, and the letters patent of December 6, 1906, after making provision for the replacement of the members appointed by the Lieutenant-Governors, and elected by the former legislative councils, enacted that the Government of the Transvaal or of the Orange River Colony might at any time after responsible government had been established in both colonies, give notice either to the other to terminate the Council or any of the services administered by it at the expiration of six months. In virtue of these provisions the Council has now been abolished. £7,700,000 of the debt was apportioned to the Orange River Colony and £27,300,000 to the Transvaal. The railways, however, continue to be run as one concern, under the management of a joint committee of five, appointed by the governments of the two colonies, two by the Orange River Colony and three by the Transvaal, to which both parliaments have delegated power to authorise the necessary expenditure. Net revenue is appropriated to the payment of interest and sinking fund on the loan.

Subject.	Cape Colony.	Natal.
IV. Ejectment ...	Jurisdiction provided that title to ownership is not in question, but only right of occupation, which, during term concerned, is not of clear value of £40 or upwards to defendant. [Act 20, 1856, § 10.]	May try claims where rent claimed does not exceed jurisdiction, and where value of land, if title be disputed is not in excess of jurisdiction. [Act 22 of 1896, § 37, and Act 32, 1905, § 2.]
V. Arrest and Interdicts.	No power.	May make interdicts and orders where value of matter in dispute does not exceed jurisdiction. [Act 22, 1896, § 39.] May grant arrest of absconding debtor where sum is within jurisdiction and is not less than £10. [Act 22, 1896, § 63.]
VI. Garnishee Orders.	No power.	Under Act 32 of 1905, provision made for framing of rules as to garnishee orders. Native Cases. —A "native case" is defined to be a civil case in which all parties are natives. From the definition are excluded matters affecting immovable property, electoral or municipal franchise, &c. In native cases Magistrates exercise their ordinary jurisdiction, except in so far as it is limited or extended by Statute in certain cases.

Jurisdiction where rent, or when no rent fixed, fair rental value of property does not exceed £10 a month. [Ord. 7 of 1902, § 23 as amended by Ord. 38 of 1903, § 2.]	Jurisdiction provided that, where right of ownership is in dispute, value does not exceed £100, and where right to occupation is in dispute such right does not exceed £100 in clear value to occupier. [Proc. 21 of 1902, § 12.]	Same as Cape.
May grant orders for arrests and interdicts, but where debt or matter in dispute is above ordinary jurisdiction orders are only provisional and are returnable in the High Court. [Ord. 1 of 1906, § 1.]	May grant arrests and interdicts when debt or matter in dispute is within jurisdiction. [Proc. 21 of 1902, § 13, as amended by Ord. 12 of 1904, § 2.]	—
Power given by Ord. 1 of 1906, § 2.	Power given by Ord. 12 of 1904, § 6.	—
Native Cases. —No special provision.	Native Cases. —A "Native Court" with special powers was established for the Witwatersrand by §§ 56 to 63 of Proc. 21 of 1902.	Native Cases. —In civil cases between natives the Courts are guided by Native Law so far as that Law is not repugnant to natural justice or morality or to any order made by H.M. in Council, or to any Proclamation or Ordinance. In such cases the services of one or two native assessors may be obtained to advise Court upon Native Law and Customs, but decision is given by Magistrate alone.

II. Crimes and Offences.	In all cases of crimes and offences wherein any person is accused of any crime or offence not punishable by death, transportation or banishment. [Act 20 of 1856, § 42, as amended by § 4 of Act 21 of 1876.]	In all cases of crimes and offences except murder, rape, treason, culpable homicide, assault with intent to commit murder or rape, coining, bigamy, bestiality, sodomy, and any crime or offence for the trial of which a special court has been or may be appointed, and any crime or offence the punishment of which is placed beyond the jurisdiction of the Magistrate. [Act 22 of 1896, § 14.]
III. Powers of Punishment. A. Ordinary Jurisdiction.	No R.M., unless specially authorised by any law, may punish more severely than by fine not exceeding £10, or by imprisonment with or without hard labour and with or without spare diet, and with or without solitary confinement, or either of them for a period not exceeding 3 months, or by a whipping privately in prison not exceeding 36 lashes. Whipping cannot be inflicted except on a second or subsequent conviction of some crime or offence within 2 years. Any offender may be punished by both such fine and such imprisonment, or by both such imprisonment and such whipping, but not, for the same offence, both by fine and whipping. [Act 20 of 1856, § 42, as amended by Act 21 of 1876, § 4.] No female may be sentenced to personal correction or to hard labour on any road or public place. [Act 20 of 1856, § 43.]	Chief Magistrates may punish by fine not exceeding £50 or by imprisonment with or without hard labour not exceeding one year, or by whipping not exceeding 25 lashes. [Act 32 of 1905, § 3.] Other Magistrates may punish by fine not exceeding £20 or by imprisonment with or without hard labour not exceeding 6 months, or by whipping not exceeding 20 lashes. [Act 22 of 1896, § 21.] Females may not be whipped. Imprisonment and whipping may be joined, or any one class of punishment awarded, or imprisonment may be awarded in conjunction with or as alternative to fine.

IV. Preparatory Examinations.	When a complaint is laid of the commission of a crime which seems more fitting for trial before a Superior Court, or when during the hearing of a summary trial the crime appears of such magnitude as to be only subject to the jurisdiction of a Superior Court, the magistrate is required to take a preparatory examination. [Ord. 40 of 1828 and Ord. 8 of 1852.] If there is not sufficient ground for committal for trial the accused is discharged. All records of preparatory examinations are submitted to Attorney-General, who may order prisoner to be liberated or to be committed for trial to High Court, or may order further investigation or take other measures for trial of prisoner. [Ord. 40 of 1828.]	In cases of crimes which are beyond a Magistrate's jurisdiction or which are too serious for summary trial by himself, a preparatory examination is held. The accused may be discharged or committed for trial. [Ord. 18 of 1845.] The depositions are transmitted to Attorney-General, who either orders liberation of the accused or directs that further inquiries be made, or makes arrangements for trial of accused. VI. Appeal ...	Any person convicted by any Court of R.M. and sentenced to any period of imprisonment or to pay any fine, or to receive any number of lashes or cuts, may appeal against such conviction and sentence to Supreme Court, or in Eastern Districts either to Supreme Court or to Eastern Districts Court, or to Circuit Court for district in which alleged offence was committed. [Act 21 of 1876, § 4, as amended by Act 35 of 1893, § 5.]	A person convicted may appeal to Supreme Court or to a Circuit Court having jurisdiction, and Court may reverse, alter, vary or confirm Magistrate's judgment or sentence, and make any proper order. [Act 22 of 1896, § 68.]
VII. Native Cases ...	No special provision made.	A native case is defined to be a criminal case in which the accused is a native. [Act 49 of 1898, § 5.] From the definition are excluded cases of crimes and offences under Laws relating to Customs, Railways, Stamps, etc. In Native cases Magistrates exercise their ordinary jurisdiction except in so far as it is limited or extended by Statute in certain cases. A right of appeal lies from judgment of Magistrate to Judge or full court of Native High Court, whether first tried by Magistrate or heard by him in appeal from judgment of a chief. But no such appeal may be instituted without permission of a Judge of Native High Court, unless Magistrate has imposed fine exceeding £5 or imprisonment for more than one month, or whipping of more than ten lashes. [Act 49 of 1898, § 56, and Act 47 of 1901, § 7.]
VIII. Appellate Jurisdiction.	None.	Native Cases: Magistrates' Courts are Courts of Appeal from judgment of Native Chiefs, and may confirm, alter, amend or set aside judgment of a Native Chief, or try case afresh, or remit for retrial. [Act 49 of 1898, § 56.]

D.—NATIVE HIGH COURT.

NATAL.

Native High Court.—Exercises jurisdiction over all Natives in Native cases. [Act 49, 1898, § 25.] Civil and criminal cases may be tried either before Full Court or by a single Judge.

No right to trial by Jury exists.

Supreme Court has no jurisdiction whether in Appeal or otherwise in matters within jurisdiction of Native High Court except in case of a person other than a Native being allowed to intervene in a case tried before Native High Court.

Civil Jurisdiction.—Jurisdiction in all Civil Native cases (Act 49, 1898, § 37). No Civil case of first instance may, however, be tried before Full Court, except by leave, unless claim involves not less than £100, or a matrimonial cause [§ 38.]

Appeals.—Full Court may deal with Appeals from inferior Courts or from judgment of a single Judge in Circuit whether in civil or criminal matters. [Act 49 of 1898 and Act 47, 1901.] Right of Appeal to Privy Council is in no way interfered with by Act 49 of 1898 and its amendments.

Criminal Jurisdiction.—Jurisdiction in certain crimes when committed by Natives without prejudice to jurisdiction of Magistrates. [Act, 49, 1898, § 29, and Act 47, 1901, § 4.]

Punishment.—Same jurisdiction as formerly vested in Supreme Court before passing of Courts Act, 1898, except power of sentencing to death. [Act 49, 1898, § 30.]

Appeals from.—No statutory provision exists for regulating appeals to the Privy Council. Appellants are guided by Privy Council rules.

Circuits.—A Judge of Native High Court sitting in Circuit has same jurisdiction as Full Court, subject to review, and with right before judgment of referring any matter to Full Court. He may also reserve a point of law for decision by Full Court. [Act 49, 1898, §§ 21, 33, 37 and 38.] Appeal lies to Full Court in both criminal and civil cases, but in a civil case only by consent of a Judge or Full Court if claim does not exceed £50, and in matrimonial causes. May consider Appeal from Magistrate's Court.

E.—CIRCUIT

Subject.	Cape Colony.	Natal.
I. Jurisdiction ...	Each Circuit Court, within district in which it is held, has the same jurisdiction as is vested in Supreme Court throughout the whole of the Colony. [Charter of Justice, § 39.]	Each Circuit Court is held before one Judge, and has the same jurisdiction within the district as is vested in Supreme Court both in civil and criminal matters.
II. Appellate Jurisdiction	Hear appeals from the inferior Courts within their jurisdiction. [Act 20 of 1856, § 33, and Act 21 of 1876, § 4.]	Hear appeals from Magistrates' Courts in both civil and criminal cases. [Act 22 of 1896, §§ 68 and 69.]
III. Appeals from ...	Appeals in civil and criminal cases lie to Supreme Court sitting as Court of Appeal. Quicksilver not specified	Gold, silver and any other proclaimed mineral.	No definition.
Only owner may prospect on private land without a licence. Others only with his consent.	Prospecting on private land only with consent of owner, or without his consent if he does not bona fide prospect and has not carried on bona fide agricultural or pastoral operations for 3 months of the preceding 12.	No "private land."
Prospecting on Crown Lands whether alienated or not depends on agreement with Government.	Prospecting on Crown or alienated Crown land (unless withdrawn) under prospecting permit by any white person over 16 at 5s. per annum, which gives exclusive rights in a prospecting area of 2,000 x 2,000 ft. Consent of owner of alienated Crown land not required.	Prospecting on Crown Land under licence carrying obligation to prospect, £1. Any person of full age may get such a licence. No limit until discovery is made, then sole right to prospect within 1,000 feet of discovery for one, or in circumstances 3 months.

	Cape Colony.	Natal.
TITLE.
(a) Owners Rights on private land.	On private land owner has entire disposal of all mineral rights.	Owner has exclusive right for 3 months after the pegging of the first four prospecting claims to peg out as many mining claims as he likes, paying only half licence money. He receives half all licences, rents and royalties paid to the Government, and is entitled to certain compensation for damage from the claimholder.
On alienated Crown Lands.	On alienated Crown land owner may take a mineral lease of from 2 to 5 years over $\frac{1}{16}$ th of farm at a rent of 2/- per morgen with right of renewal for 5 years if ground has been worked, or he may peg out 50 claims after discoverer. Also owner gets $\frac{1}{4}$ ths of royalties on all claims for which he provides a depositing site and half rent and royalties on a lease of an abandoned digging. He may reserve his homestead from proclamation, but must compensate for damage a lessee without mineral rights. Lessees of Crown Land under any Act are entitled to owner's rights.	The law does not deal with alienated Crown Land.

Orange River Colony.	Transvaal.	Southern Rhodesia.
After the discoverer the owner gets mynpacht over $\frac{1}{10}$ of proclaimed area which he may select before proclamation, also right to reserve from proclamation, but without mining rights, land occupied by buildings, cultivation, &c. Also owner's claims according to the area proclaimed, but not exceeding 75. Half the claim licences and $\frac{1}{2}$ the price paid for lapsed claims, $\frac{1}{2}$ of the stand licences, except in townships, where he gets $\frac{1}{2}$ and the whole of the price of the stands.	Mynpacht over $\frac{1}{5}$ of proclaimed area at 10s. per morgen per annum, with right to reserve from proclamation the homestead, buildings, cultivated land and water for farming and mining operations, without mineral rights. Half claim licences or rent on the remaining land, and half stand licences.	Alienated Crown land is dealt with like ordinary Crown Land. There is apparently no "private land."
Owner gets 12 claims and compensation if expropriated.	None, except to certain compensation under Ordinances 45 of 1902 and 57 of 1903.	In certain case the owner gets $\frac{1}{2}$ all licences and rents.

	Cape Colony.	Natal.
(b) Discoverer's Rights.	50 claims in one block on Crown Land, and 50 claims in not more than two blocks on alienated Crown land; a bonus of £5,000 if 25,000 ounces are extracted within 5 years. Other prospectors whose areas are included in proclaimed digging are entitled to two claims each next after discoverer and owner, if any.	Can convert his four prospecting claims into mining claims.
(c) Rights of the General Public.	Any male person of full age may peg out not exceeding 5 claims, 150 × 800 feet. No licence fee is payable, only a royalty of one per centum on gross amount realised by sale of mineral found.	Claims may be pegged after the discoverer and owner are satisfied. The licence is £1 per month plus a royalty of 1½ per cent. and may be obtained by any European over 16.

Orange River Colony.	Transvaal.	Southern Rhodesia.
On private land gets $\frac{1}{10}$ of the land up to 75 claims free of licence. On Crown land according to agreement.	One claim per 60 morgen, with a maximum of 50 claims and a minimum of 10 claims on private and 25 on Crown land, with an additional 1 claim per 60 morgen for every 1,000 ft. in depth at which the discovery was made, free of licence so long as prospecting and mining is carried on to the satisfaction of the mining commissioner.	May peg 10 claims on which he must do a certain amount of development work under pain of forfeiture, which however, may be commuted by payment or an "inspection certificate." The British South Africa Co. has a $\frac{1}{10}$ mining interest in all mining locations which cannot be worked for profit till an agreement is made with the Company, after which the provisions as to compulsory development cease, and each claim pays a licence of 10/- per month (or 5/- if unworked). After 1/1/08 a graduated royalty is substituted for the $\frac{1}{10}$ interest. The claimholder has the right to follow the reef beyond his boundaries.
On proclamation of private land the right to peg up to 50 claims is given out to Europeans over 18 in order of application to the Resident Magistrate. On Crown land they are sold by auction in blocks of not more than 100 claims. A claim is 150 by 400 ft.	Proclaimed land may be either thrown open to pegging, leased, or worked as a State mine. In the former case any white person over 16 may peg up to 50 claims 150 x 400 ft. under prospecting licence at 5s. per claim per month on private, and 2s. 6d. on Crown land. When the producing stage is reached the licence money is raised to £1 per claim per month in all cases. If leases are granted, stipulations must be made for the provision of working capital, satisfactory working, and the payment of an agreed percentage of the annual net produce, and of a rent equivalent to the ordinary licence moneys. Abandoned or unsuitable ground may be granted under mynrecht on special terms.	The general public other than prospectors have no rights.

A.—PRECIOUS METALS

	Cape Colony.	Natal.
(d) Proclamation.	Private land is not proclaimed. Alienated Crown Land cannot be proclaimed unless the owner himself has prospected or permitted prospecting. The Government must be satisfied that minerals exist in payable quantities.	No actual proclamation.
(e) Security of Title.	If a claim is unworked for 4 months a charge of £2 per month may be imposed, which may be increased to £4 after a further 4 months. If bona-fide development is not commenced and continued within one year, or by consent of the Governor two years, claims may be forfeited.	Claims must be worked in accordance with regulation or pay an exemption licence of 10/- per month.

Orange River Colony.	Transvaal.	Southern Rhodesia.
Private land cannot be proclaimed unless the owner has prospected or permitted prospecting. The Government may appoint a Board to advise as to whether minerals exist in payable quantities.	Before proclaiming any ground the Governor must be satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for believing that precious metals exist in payable quantities. Private land cannot be proclaimed without the written consent of the owner unless he has himself prospected or permitted prospecting, but if the Governor believes that precious metals exist he may instruct the Government Mining Engineer to investigate, and may then proclaim the land after 12 months notice to the owner. Pegging is not allowed before proclamation.	None.
If claims are not properly worked licence money may be doubled. Provisions as to special registration, etc., resemble those of the Transvaal.	There is provision for special registration which is conclusive evidence of title. If claims held under prospecting licence are not adequately prospected, the licence may be raised to 15s. per claim per month. If work has been commenced on ground held under mining title and is afterwards suspended, the Minister may appoint a commission of enquiry and thereafter, if not satisfied as to the reasons for suspension, may call on the holder to resume work on pain of forfeiture.	Unworked claims may be forfeited, but forfeiture may be commuted by payment.

	Cape Colony.	Natal.
(f) Surface Rights.	Claimholders have, in addition to their claims, the right to depositing sites and machinery sites free of charge, but without any mineral rights over such ground.	Same in principle as Transvaal, except the occupier of the surface is entitled to compensation from the claimholder.
MINING REGULATIONS.	Makes regulations for protection of life and limb, sanitation, &c.	Makes regulations for protection of life and limb, sanitation, &c., and may make regulations dealing with hours of labour. Grants certificates of competency.
MINING REVENUE.	$\frac{1}{10}$ of owner's rents, etc., on private land. Royalty of one per centum on gross amount realised by sale of minerals won from claims on alienated Crown Land. $\frac{1}{2}$ of royalty collected goes to owner, conditional upon his providing depositing sites. In case of leases of abandoned diggings a rent fixed by Governor and royalty not less than one per centum on gross amount realised by sale of minerals won; if digging is on alienated Crown land owner gets one-half of rent and royalty collected.	£6 per annum per claim and a royalty of $1\frac{1}{2}$ per cent on Crown land and $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. on private land.
TRANSFER DUTY.	Transfers of claims are charged 2/6, or if the value exceeds £50, 1 per cent. Amalgamations however pay only $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. with a maximum of £200.	The presence of minerals may not be taken into account in assessing Transfer duty.
MISCELLANEOUS.	No provisions for prevention of gold thefts.	Same as Transvaal.

Orange River Colony.	Transvaal.	Southern Rhodesia.
Much the same as Transvaal, except landowner's rights survive over all areas not actually used for mining purposes.	Mining title carries no right to the use of the surface except for mining operations. Other users are governed by complicated provisions, and the Government has the right to use or grant the surface for certain specified purposes. Trading on mining ground is forbidden except under special regulations. The possession of surface rights does not involve the under-mining rights, which under certain circumstances may be leased by the Government, the disposal of the proceeds being still unsettled.	Much the same as Transvaal, except remainder of surface rights is vested in the British South Africa Co. Rights to residential sites, machine stands, &c., do include mineral rights, and occupier of surface is entitled to compensation from claimholder.
Makes regulations for protection of life and limb, sanitation, &c. Grants certificates of competency.	There is an elaborate code of regulations for the protection of life and limb, sanitation, the grant of certificates of competency, etc.	Makes regulations for the protection of life and limb, sanitation, &c.
Almost the same as the Transvaal, except there is no profit tax. Owner gets half all licence money.	Ten per cent. Profits Tax. On every digger's claim £6 per annum on private and £12 on Crown land. 10s. per morgen per annum on mynpachts. The proceeds of the lease of proclaimed ground. The whole of the stand-licences on Crown land and $\frac{1}{2}$ on private land.	The British South Africa Co. has a $\frac{1}{8}$ interest and also gets £6 per annum per claim.
1% instead of 4% as on other fixed property.	Same for mining title as other property, viz.:— $1\frac{1}{4}$ per cent. ad valorem .	1 per cent. or $\frac{1}{2}$ in the case of amalgamations and reconstructions.
Same as Transvaal ...	Trading in unwrought gold is strictly regulated and only allowed under licence. The onus of proof of innocence in certain particulars is on the accused.	Same as Transvaal.

PROSPECTING ...	Provisions only differ slightly from alluvial precious metals.	Provisions same as for alluvial precious metals.
TITLE—
(a) Owner's Rights...	On private land owner has all mineral rights. On alienated Crown land owner gets 50 claims after discoverer, free of licence money while held in his own name. He further gets $\frac{1}{2}$ of all licence monies, and, in case of abandoned diggings lease, $\frac{1}{2}$ of rent and royalty.
(b) Discoverer's Rights.	20 claims in block free of licence money while held in his own name.
(c) Rights of Public	Every certificated miner may peg off one claim after discoverer and owner, and after seven days a further five claims. A certificate of character from the Diggers' Committee must be produced before claim licence can be issued. Claims are 30 feet square and licence 10/- per month unless otherwise fixed by the Governor.
MINING REGULA- TIONS.	Same as Transvaal.
MINING REVENUE...	Derived from licence monies, rents and royalties of abandoned digging leases, transfer charges, and the $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. export and import duties on stones as under Mines.
MISCELLANEOUS ...	Mining Boards may be created with rating powers; claims being exempt from Divisional Council and Municipal rates. N.B.— There is also a Dredging Lease. £5 per mile of river per annum for first year, then one per cent. royalty on amount realised by sale of stones won.

E.—COAL AND

Cape Colony.	Natal.	Orange River Colony.
On private property base minerals entirely belong to owner, who pays no royalty. On Crown Land a prospecting licence, 1s. per month for 1,000 acre area, is required; if successful, a lease may be granted. Rent not exceeding 1/- per acre per annum and royalty of one per centum on gross amount realised by sale of minerals won. Formerly leases were 5/- per morgen rent and royalty of not more than 10/- per ton of ore raised. The royalty is fixed differently for various minerals, e.g., copper 2/6, iron 3d., coal 6d., &c. Many of old leases still extant and not yet brought under Act 16 of 1907. 10% tax on profits in excess of £50,000 earned during year ended 30/6/7, of Copper Mining Co.'s.	The provisions as to coal and base metals are the same as for gold and diamonds, except that the size of a "mineral" claim is 700 × 700 yards. It pays a monthly licence of £2 and a royalty of 1½ per cent., of which half goes to the owner. Prospecting for coal and similar substances is not permitted on private land without the consent of the owner.	Much the same as Transvaal, but there is a royalty of not more than 1½ per cent. Tax of not less than 1½d. or more than 3d. per ton (at present 1½d.) on coal. Mineral rights of Crown Land may be leased on certain prescribed terms. Coal and mineral oil on alienated Crown land are reserved to the Crown.

OTHER MINERALS.

On Crown land or alienated Crown land the provisions of the law as to precious metals apply mutatis mutandis to base metals. On private land the entire ownership of a right of disposing of base metals is vested in the owner subject to payment of a royalty of 1 per cent. ad valorem. The provisions applicable to precious metals on private land may be applied by proclamation to base metals, saving all rights of the owner.	Provisions much the same as for gold in reefs, except that the B.S.A. Co. has no interest in coal locations, though it has in copper, iron, lead and tin. The holder of a prospecting licence may obtain a prospecting area of 150 morgen for coal or of a radius of 3,000 feet for copper, etc., and a mining location of one morgen for every £2 spent in prospecting for coal, or 30 claims of 90,000 square feet each for copper, etc. For coal he pays £1 per annum per 50 morgen and a royalty of 1 per cent. for every ton over 20 tons per 50 morgen. For copper, etc., he pays £5 per claim per month from the commencement of working for profit, besides the share of profits.

IX.—THE NEGRO IN AMERICA

BY

W. L. HONNOLD.

While it is true that the American negro question can only be understood in its full significance by those familiar with the racial characteristics of the African native, it is equally true that in considering the future of the latter much may be gained through acquaintance with the history and present condition of the race in the United States. In fact, the two lines of inquiry are so complementary that it is doubtful if a sound policy could be arrived at in either country without taking into account experience in the other. Certainly the mistakes made in America have resulted largely through disregard of African antecedents, and, although we in Africa may properly claim greater familiarity with fundamental circumstances, it is not impossible that, through failure to grasp their full ethnological significance, we may make to some extent, but with more far-reaching consequences, similar mistakes. Even though we should feel inclined to minimise this danger, it is still worth our while, if but for confirmatory evidence alone, to follow the native to America and note the effects of an environment which, if open for criticism, has, on the whole, probably been more favourable to him than may be hoped for here.

Questions of purely American import need not be touched on except in so far as they may bear on racial characteristics.

In the main, the evolutionary lines of inquiry adopted by *Tillinghast will be followed, and an attempt will be made to give due weight to the influence of both heredity and environment. It is unnecessary to dwell on the relative importance of these two influences, except to recall that character is neither born nor made, but a subtle compound of both inherited and acquired traits. It may be modified to a varying extent by environment, but new qualities thus acquired are not necessarily permanent; for each succeeding generation there is danger of reversion, and it is only under circumstances of existence so exacting as to lead to elimination of the unstable that there is a chance for that continued transmission of acquired virtues so essential to the gradual building-up of enduring character.

Such circumstances have not surrounded the negro. Whatever his primal origin may have been, it is certain that for ages his home has been in Africa, and his character moulded by tropical conditions. This was especially true of the West Coast natives from whom the American stock came; and, although for hundreds of years following migration from the north our own natives have had the correcting climatic influence of this latitude and elevation, it is doubtful if they show sufficiently marked progress to justify discussion from a different standpoint, especially so if we bear in mind the selective influences brought to bear on the American slaves.

At the time of transportation two racial types were distinguishable on the West Coast, the Bantu of Lower Guinea and the Sudanese of Upper Guinea. The points of difference, however, were slight, and we may take it that there was practical identity in all particulars important to this discussion, not only as between these two types but also as between them and the Bantu of South Africa.

It is therefore unnecessary to go into particulars as to their characteristics. We need only briefly recall that they were at a stage of development somewhat advanced beyond nomadic savagery toward settled agriculture. Their physique was good, but there was little evidence of mental progress. In fact, it would seem that for thousands of years they had been more or less in a state of arrested mental development. They had no letters, arts or sciences; their industries were most elementary; religion was crudely anthropomorphic, and language in the agglutinative stage. Psychically they were analogous to children of more advanced races; spontaneity, intuition, and imitativeness were strong characteristics, but there was a general lack of application, inventiveness, and reasoning power. They were notably improvident, and universally lacking in sustained energy. And, what is of most significance, they were peculiarly deficient in will-power, that attribute so essential to stability of purpose, staying qualities, and self-control.

There is nothing in this characterisation that can be regarded with surprise. It is but a reflection of the environment, and could be arrived at with equal certainty through inductive reasoning. For ages these people had comparatively little inducement either to industrial efficiency or mental advancement. Tropical surroundings had not only tended to minimise their requirements as to food, clothing, and habitation, but also to simplify the satisfaction of these demands. Furthermore, the climatic conditions, involving as they did excessive heat and humidity for the greater part of the year, had been distinctly inimical to industrial and mental effort, as well as to the exercise of will power. In other words, the struggle for existence had been along such simple lines, and after so spiritless a fashion that there was little chance for the correcting influence of the law of natural selection. Consequently, the standard of development was not only low, but, what is of most vital importance, it had continued so through such generations of time as to fix in the race a fundamental ineptitude for progress, a trait which has stubbornly resisted the more favourable environments of America and South Africa, and promises to be of grave significance in the future.

Let us now consider these people as influenced by transference to America.

Their introduction as slaves was in the beginning regarded as merely a temporary expedient to overcome a shortage of labour similar to that experienced in most colonies. At first they were used throughout the country; gradually, however, as white immigration increased in the north, but more especially because the economic conditions in that section were less favourable to their use, they were for the most part concentrated in the southern colonies, and continued there, a fixed institution, for over two hundred years.

The influences incidental to the change from West Africa were of mixed significance. On the one hand, although the negroes have always been a decreasing element in the total population of the United States, dropping from 19.3 per cent. in 1790 to 11.6 per cent. in 1900, the degree to which they have been subject to the influences consciously or unconsciously exerted by their white superiors has in the main been much less than is suggested by these percentages; for, in the eighteen Southern States which now include about nine-tenths of them they still form about one-third of the population, and in two instances slightly over one-half. Furthermore, in considering the bearing of the American environment, it must be remembered that, although the slave trade was nominally suppressed in 1808, it was not until 1863 that it actually came to an end; therefore, there was always present a certain retroactive influence, due to the admixture of fresh African blood, which tended to offset advancement already made. Also, we have to bear in mind those adverse psychological influences inseparable from the institution of slavery even under the most humane circumstances. On the other hand, there were a number of circumstances incidental to transplanting which could not but exert a strong influence for the betterment of so immature a people. Not only were they freed in large measure from the irresistible control of their old environment, but, what is of more significance, they were at once brought into contact with powerful constructive influences of a favourable nature. Amongst these may be mentioned the conscious efforts made by owners to improve the general standard, as well as the unconscious and more natural forces of example and suggestion which were brought to bear and could not but act with peculiar power on so imitative and susceptible a race. The bearing of these various forces, and the degree to which they came into play, are questions of such vital importance that we may with advantage refer to them in some detail. First, let us consider the two influences acting directly on germ heredity, Selection and Amalgamation.

Selection is more or less an accompaniment of all migration. If the movement be voluntary, it may be assumed for each class of participants that as a rule it will be of somewhat superior physical and psychological development. On the other hand, if migration be enforced, there will also be selection, but it will vary as to trend and degree according to attending circumstances. In the case of the American slaves there was probably as drastic an application of this principle, especially as to physique, as has ever been known. Not only were they collected under conditions practically precluding the unfit, but, before shipment, they were submitted to most rigid inspection in order to minimise transportation losses, and, following this, were subjected to the rigours of a passage which led to still further elimination; consequently, in the end, the physique of the stock landed in America was distinctly superior to the standard of West Africa. A certain number were no doubt somewhat broken in health after so much hardship, but even they must have been of such innate soundness as to assure an early recovery of at least congenital vigour. As to the psychic effect of these experiences, there is ground for difference of opinion. No doubt, in the first instance, some of the more adept escaped capture; as against this, however, we have to recall that amongst primitive races mental and physical excellence are as a rule concomitant. It would seem that we may at least go so far as to say that the mental and moral standard of the American importation was equal to the average of West Africa. On arriving in America further selective influences were brought to bear. Not only did masters control with more or less deliberation and success the relations of the sexes from both the physical and mental standpoint, but also, by the practice of "selling South" bad or lazy characters, they at once raised the standard of the border States, and, incidentally, subjected the undesirables to the harsher control of the far South, where either improvement or extermination was inevitable. The question naturally arises whether along with these selective influences for good there were not others of equal or greater importance of an adverse character. Was the change not calculated to make better slaves than citizens? In other words, did the African native under the conditions of his introduction into America have a fair chance for the development of mental vigour, self-reliance, will-power and the other essential attributes of racial progress? The answers would involve reference to influences apart from selection which still remain to be discussed, and, therefore, to a large extent, would be anticipatory. It may, however, be noted in passing that opinion on this matter will inevitably be influenced by the point of view. Those who have no exact knowledge of primitive races, especially if they be of large humanity, will readily minimise inherited characteristics and jump to the conclusion that, since slavery is in principle inimical to the development of character, therefore it must have operated seriously against the advancement of the American negro. There is unquestionably much of abstract truth in this contention, and, undoubtedly, slavery under any circumstances falls far short of being an ideal institution. At the same time, those who know the negro most intimately cannot lose sight of his comparative immaturity, and of the fact that, under any possible circumstances of association, the white man must inevitably, in the beginning at least, assume a paternal attitude toward him. In view of this fundamental inequality, as well as because of the fact that from the standpoint of acquired congenital characteristics the time spent in slavery was comparatively short, it is easy to understand why many arrive at the conclusion that, on the whole, much more of good than of bad influence was involved.

With regard to the other directly hereditary influence, that is, amalgamation, it should be noted that this was of two kinds; legitimate, as between pure-blooded negroes, and illegitimate, as between whites and blacks. The first was natural, and probably on the whole beneficial, involving as it did the blending of various closely allied tribes until in the end there was practical homogeneity. The second was exclusively as between the white male and coloured female, was general but by no means universal, and, at the beginning of the war, had extended so as to influence between twenty and thirty per cent. of the race. At present between eleven and sixteen per cent. are believed to have some degree of white blood. In considering the bearing of this form of amalgamation it seems permissible to make some allowance for the fact that in some cases it was in a limited sense natural, and, therefore, more apt to exert a favourable influence than that which has continued since slavery, and that which obtains in this country. For, before the war, the relation between the two races was radically different from what it is now. Then the association of whites and blacks was frequently of life-long significance, overlapping in many instances from generation to generation, especially in the household of the master. Under such circumstances it was inevitable that a certain degree of intimacy and sympathy should exist between the youth of the two races, which, although not altering their relative social status, was distinctly favourable, especially in view of the innate sensuality of the negro, to cohabitation without, necessarily, an accompanying sense of depravity, and therefore, in some instances at least, without unnatural prejudice to the progeny. No doubt the resulting modifications reflect for the most part the engrafted qualities of the white overseer class, but it is also probable that to some extent an element of gentility was introduced. One can only surmise as to the ultimate bearing of this factor. The notable negro leaders may reflect its influence to a greater degree than is commonly recognised, and, since the hope of the race is in its own leaders, it may be that, in the final analysis, this transient factor, operating in conjunction with the law of survival, will be acknowledged as of considerable importance. Be this as it may, we still have to recognise that on the whole, and apart from notable exceptions, amalgamation as between whites and blacks has been unfavourable to the race. This is particularly true as regards physique and fertility, authorities agreeing that in these respects mulattoes show distinct evidence of degeneracy. On the other hand, from a psychic standpoint, there is marked evidence of improvement, mulattoes unquestionably showing greater intellectual capacity, artistic sense, and nervous energy, accompanied too frequently, however, by a decline in moral vigour and resolution. To what extent these latter disadvantages may in time be overcome is a question which only the future can determine. For the present one may only say that, notwithstanding the more prominent and successful coloured people of to-day are mulattoes, a fact to be kept in mind when considering the capacity of the pure-blooded African, white amalgamation, more particularly the Negro-

Teutonic type, has so far not worked for the general advancement of the coloured race. Certainly there is an absence of that marked improvement so notable where less divergent races have amalgamated.

Let us next consider the environmental influences brought to bear on the negro during slavery. First, we have to note a radical improvement in physical surroundings. Climate in particular was distinctly more favourable. It is true that in the Gulf States summer heat is sometimes extreme; but it is never continuous over long periods, and is not accompanied to so great a degree by excessive humidity and other enervating circumstances as in West Africa. In fact, even in these least favoured States, conditions are clearly not inimical to a progressive white civilisation. Therefore, we must conclude that taken altogether the climate of America, with its varying seasons and activities, could not but have exerted a most beneficial influence both on the negroes' physical influence and psychic nature. In addition to climate, the conditions as to food, clothing, housing, medical care and sanitations were all more favourable to racial advancement than those formerly known. It is impossible under the circumstances to refer in particular to the nature and bearing of these various factors, although it may be noted that any uncertainty as to their favourable character is answered by the fact that the race consistently multiplied at a rate corresponding to that of the whites. There was no evidence of that tendency to elimination which has so frequently been evidenced where inferior peoples have come into close touch with civilisation. This fact, after all, is the determining one as to whether the physical environment of America was favourable to survival and therefore to advancement.

With regard to the industrial features of the American environment under slavery, we find more complicated conditions, for we have to study the permanent significance of enforcing on the black man the activities of the white. That enforcement was necessary needs no explanation here. We are all familiar with the African's industrial traditions, and know how opposed they are to our own. Habits of action which we naturally adopt in unconscious obedience to a high standard of public opinion, the outgrowth of generations of thrifty and progressive ancestry, offer little attraction to the African native with his radically-opposed inheritance. Even here in Africa, where the native in return for compensation of uncommon significance is disposed to compromise his industrial conceptions for short periods of time, we find it necessary as a rule to exercise close supervision and a varying degree of pressure in order to get but inadequate service. It is therefore not difficult to understand that under American slavery, implying as it did both permanent control and profitable exploitation of the race, still greater constraint was necessary. This, admittedly, was not always wisely exerted, although it should be borne in mind that the self-interest of the owner, acting in accordance with long experience, and with regard for the value of his slave property present and prospective, would naturally have inclined him to protect and train the negro, and, even in his harshness, to enforce standards of conduct on the whole favourable to advancement. But, apart from these considerations, we have to recognise in the system certain inherent industrial defects, amongst which was failure to suitably reward effort. This naturally led to the elimination in large measure of all incentives to service except fear or personal attachment, and consequently there was lacking one of the most powerful motives of racial progress. On the other hand, it is open to question whether, in the absence of those higher motives influencing the industrial attitude of the white man, the negro's advancement would have been more marked under less restricted conditions and in open competition with the white race. Certainly he would have been greatly handicapped by his natural heedlessness and aversion to sustained effort. It is, of course, impossible to measure the relative significance of all the industrial influences which came into play, but we may with profit recall their results as roughly reflected by the four classes which gradually evolved. First came the field hands, by far the largest class numerically, who were confined to more or less monotonous labour under close supervision, and who, aside from the acquirement of a limited degree of industrial proficiency, showed but little advance in enlightenment. From this class were recruited the three upper classes; therefore, it suffered somewhat through the retroactive influences of selection. The second class included mechanics of various degrees of importance. Although relatively small in numbers, it is interesting as showing, at least to some extent, capacity of a sort quite incompatible with the race's former experience. Its standard of efficiency, however, was comparatively low, and it was always marked by carelessness and abuse in the handling of material and tools. The third class, including house and body servants, was of greater importance numerically than the second, and is of particular interest because of the comparatively close and intimate relationship which existed between it and the whites. Unquestionably it showed considerable advancement in skill, as well as in refinement, but its standard of efficiency was, on the whole, low, and, generally speaking, it was much more important numerically than it would have been under a system of free white labour. The fourth class, made up of the few who had advanced to positions of trust and executive responsibility, is perhaps of most interest and importance to us. It included in some instances picked men, who dealt directly with the master and exercised the usual functions of the customary white overseer, but more generally was represented by those acting as sub-overseers. In all cases, however, it reflected marked superiority and exceptional capacity. It was, of course, the outcome of most exacting selection, but, nevertheless, it served to indicate and emphasise the possibilities of the race at its best. Taking these classes as a whole, we can only say that, whilst there was abundant evidence of progress, still the American negro at the close of his slavery was distinctly inferior in competing power to the white. The degree of his inferiority cannot be accurately assessed. Olmstead, after careful comparisons, estimated it at 50 per cent., and, even where the task system prevailed, as it did in some States, he found that, although more energy and intelligence were shown, the standard of task was still comparatively low. In explanation of this inefficiency the same observer notes that, notwithstanding a generally contented and cheerful attitude, similar no doubt to that of our native labour here, there was everywhere lack of interest, failure to appreciate objective, and a disposition to regard labour as unnatural and unwarranted. He further notes that in consequence there was on all sides evasion of every conceivable sort, and such indifference to the care of tools and live-stock as to limit their employment to the varieties best calculated to withstand misuse and ill-treatment. The significance of these restrictions need not be dwelt upon. The question naturally arises, To what extent were these industrial deficiencies due to the system of slavery? Unquestionably, the institution is deficient in many respects. Even when practised under the most beneficent circumstances, and restricted to an immature race, its favourable features could probably be better realised under a system of humanely directed apprenticeship. But still, we have to bear in mind that the bad characteristics referred to were not developed in America. Indolence, carelessness, improvidence, deceitfulness, and thoughtless cruelty were all primitive attributes. They did not evolve under slavery, and they have not disappeared since its abolition. In this connection the opinion of Tillinghast is of interest. He says: "We must conclude that while our institution of slavery was ill-adapted in some ways to root out elements of undeveloped character, yet it did not bring them into existence. That they persisted was due to the mighty force of race heredity, obscurely but irresistibly dominating negro life at every point. Environmental influences, whether for good or evil, may effect much, but what we have just seen is a revelation of man's powerlessness to set aside a fundamental law of nature. With this law must reckon the American negro, and the nation of which he is a part."

Before discussing the changes which came into the life of the negro as a free citizen it may be well to refer to the bearing of the religious, social and psychic influences which surrounded him during his days of slavery.

The contrast between his primitive religion and that to which he was introduced in America was as profound as can be conceived. In Africa his religion was one of kras or localised spirits of human limitation, fetishes and witchcraft, and its exercise was chiefly directed toward specific propitiation in one form or another. It dealt principally with natural phenomena, and involved but slight comprehension of morality or social obligation. From an environment permeated with such conceptions he was uprooted and brought into contact with the exalted ideas of the white man. The change was abrupt, and perhaps its negative influences were of even greater significance, for some time at least, than the positive efforts to Christianise which were encountered. It must be remembered, however, that the negative influences incidental to removal from the old environment could not operate so effectively as they would have done had the change taken place in childhood. And it is hardly necessary to mention that the first Christian agencies which came into force were more destructive than constructive. Certain superstitions, preconceptions, and practices were voluntarily abandoned on recognition of the obviously superior conceptions of the dominant race; others, especially those of an injurious tendency, had to be overcome by discouragement and prohibition. But, sooner or later, the constructive influences of Christianity were brought to bear, although with varying force and effect according to the inclination of the master and the receptiveness of the different types and classes. The results left much to be desired, for naturally with such a people and such circumstances there was but an imperfect conception and application of the principles taught, but, on the whole, the influence of this factor was uplifting and helpful, and in the direction of a faith immeasurably more comforting and sustaining than that of primitive Africa.

From the social standpoint also there was a radical departure from former conceptions and conditions. The old environment, which called for little self-control, obligation, or co-operation, was suddenly replaced by one characterised by mental and moral restraint, mutual regard, concurrent action, and all the complex relations of a high civilisation. To what extent did the negro respond? And was his failure further to respond due more to the faults of slavery or to innate limitations as to instinct and capacity? These questions are vital and full of interest, but can be little more than suggested. Furthermore, their full significance becomes apparent only when they are made to include the subsequent history of the race. For the present we need only touch on a few of them. With regard to marriage and chastity the position was undoubtedly a difficult one. To start with, there was but a loose conception in the minds of the slaves as to sex relations. All their ideas were the outcome of generations of licentiousness and disregard of monogamic marriage. Consequently, the difficulties of the whites in enforcing new standards could be but imperfectly overcome. A great deal was accomplished, especially amongst the house-servant and other superior classes, and, although it was never possible to secure a regard for chastity even approximating that of the whites, still, on the whole, and in spite of many adverse circumstances, there was very notable improvement in this respect as compared with West Africa. In the matter of family relations the conditions of slavery were especially unfavourable, and it is not strange that advancement in this phase of life was possibly less marked than in any other direction. Naturally, the race was without any strong sense of parental devotion or responsibility; therefore, it was particularly unfortunate that the circumstances of service, requiring as they did prolonged absence of both father and mother from the family, offered little chance for the development of such attributes. It is true that this did not often involve great sense of hardship, and, beyond momentary lamentation, there was as a rule a notable indifference to separation, the tragedies of Uncle Tom's Cabin notwithstanding. On the other hand, it is unquestionable that in some instances, more especially amongst those coming into close touch with the whites, there was increasing evidence of affection and concern. One cannot but wonder as to the effect on the negro's subsequent history had this aspect of life been more generally encouraged during the race's first contact with civilisation. At the same time it should not be overlooked that naturally the African native is rather inclined to communal group life than to that of the family. In the wider and more general relationships of society there was evident improvement over former standards, although, as would be expected, it was more noticeable among the better classes. A considerable and increasing number developed into trustworthy men of broad sympathies and a controlling sense of responsibility and duty to others. As a rule, however, these characteristics were lacking, and in their place were the petty traits of an immature society.

From the psychic or temperamental standpoint there was but little change in essential character under slavery: The natural predisposition of the race to an emotional, talkative, irresponsible and heedless existence was not materially affected; and throughout bondage the negro continued careless and gay, delighting in gaudy display, a frolic or a crowd, and either indifferent to hardship and misfortune or else readily forgetting them after momentary grief. Some may urge that, since developing intelligence is inimical to the institution of slavery, and since the natural aim of owners would be to discourage educational influences, therefore but little opportunity was offered for the correction of adverse temperamental tendencies. There is a measure of truth in this contention, but, along with it, we have to recognise that the tendencies referred to were fundamental rather than engrafted, and so were not open to the correcting influence of learning to the same extent as in the case of a more advanced race. One has only to look to Africa, or to America since the war, to see the fallacy of the assumption that the negro's weakness can be corrected by literary culture alone. And it is now generally admitted that, to be of real benefit, his education must be accompanied, if not overshadowed, by training of a manual nature, especial attention being given to inculcating appreciation of objective labour as the necessary first step in racial progress. The slave owner, therefore, in minimising educational influences did not enforce an unmixed evil. In fact, there is reason to think, from what followed after freedom, that, if education, as then understood, had been attempted, its influence on the whole would have been derogatory. In a broad way, of course, education was proceeding, for, notwithstanding illiteracy and the restraints surrounding him, the negro was steadily learning the important first lessons of civilisation. He was, therefore, at the close of slavery, much better fitted than his brother in Africa to face the new circumstances under which we are now to consider him.

Generally speaking, the change to freedom was much less radical than that of introduction to America. Environment remained substantially the same, and continued its favourable influences in opposition to the retroactive forces of heredity. The essential change was as to relationship to environment. There was now freedom of opportunity, and the restraint and compulsion of the master were replaced by the surveillance of the law and the severities of the struggle for existence. To the older generation, the force of habit was sufficient to prevent radical departure from the established order of thought and action. It was the younger generation that was to be tried most severely by the new order, and it is with its experiences and those of its successors that we are most concerned.

We have seen that from an industrial standpoint considerable progress had been shown under slavery, but that, as regards efficiency, the negroes were still far behind the white race, and, we may add, were losing rather than gaining ground in their aggregate competitive influence. Whether or not this position should be attributed more to inherited characteristics, as has been suggested, than to those of an acquired nature, as is frequently urged, is a question that cannot be definitely decided, although, possibly, individual opinion may be assisted by the following considerations. In the first place, we have to recognise that different opinions as to the negro's importance as a worker may be largely due to differences as between employers, as well as between employments. Some employers are unqualified or temperamentally unfit to manage crude labour, and some industries are better suited than others for the utilisation of such labour. These points are well understood here, but it may be of interest to recall American experience bearing on them, as well as on the broader questions of the inherent capacity of negroes for industrial life. Where success has attended their employment in that country, it has been along lines quite different from those followed in the case of white labour. The strictest discipline has been enforced, indulgencies have been discouraged, and, generally speaking, the attitude of the successful employer has been one of firm and exacting paternalism. A more lenient policy, or one relying on the ordinary incentives of the white man to labour, has, as a rule, failed, the naturally irresponsible and improvident disposition of the negroes resulting under these circumstances in such badly-directed and inconstant service as to disqualify them from competition with more expensive white labour. The general bearing of this inherently unprogressive spirit is reflected by the fact that staple crops of the Southern States have decreased in quantity where the negro population has held its own or gained in relative numbers; whereas, they have shown steady improvement where the influence of the whites has been in the ascendancy. Inefficiency is also reflected by the decreasing importance of the race in skilled trades, which are particularly reliable as an index of character because of the demand they make for patient and uninterrupted service. Such occupations do not appeal to the negro of the younger generation, and, even when following them, his inclination is to work the minimum time consistent with bare subsistence, and to utilise every opportunity for idleness and the search for an easier job. Consequently, in this most important direction, the race has, at least temporarily, failed; as Booker Washington, whose sympathies cannot be questioned, puts it: "The place made vacant by the old coloured man, who was trained as a carpenter during slavery, and who since the war had been the leading contractor and builder in the Southern town, had to be filled. No young coloured carpenter, capable of filling his place, could be found. The result was that his place was filled by a white mechanic from the North, or from Europe, or from elsewhere. What is true of carpentry and house building in this case is true, in a degree, in every skilled occupation; and it is becoming true of common labour. I do not mean to say that all skilled labour has been taken out of the negro's hands; but I do mean to say that in no part of the South is he so strong in the matter of skilled labour as he was twenty years ago, except possibly in the country districts and smaller towns. In the more northern of the southern cities, such as Richmond and Baltimore, the change is most apparent; and it is being felt in every southern city. Wherever the negro has lost ground industrially in the South it is not because there is prejudice against him as a skilled labourer on the part of the native southern white man; the southern white man generally prefers to do business with the negro mechanic rather than with a white man, because he is accustomed to do business with the negro in this respect." Mr. Washington lays much stress on improvidence as a factor in the misfortunes of his people. In fact, their innate attitude of disregard for the future, for "the rainy day," is recognised by all as a most serious handicap to advancement. Indebtedness is everywhere, more or less, a normal state, and the crop-mortgage system, so blighting in its influence, is prevalent throughout the agricultural sections. What is not swallowed up by these agencies is too often wasted on personal adornment, amusement, and contributions to overpretentious religious and social organisations. Notwithstanding these adverse general tendencies, there is still evidence, of large dimensions in the aggregate, of steady industrial progress on the part of a small minority. This is seen not only in agriculture and the trades, but, to a considerable extent, in various business undertakings, and to some degree in the professions and the civil service. In agriculture, which provides for over three-fourths of the negro population, the last census (1900) shows that of 746,715 farms operated by negroes, representing about 41 per cent. of the total negro homes, 21 per cent., or, say, 8 per cent. of the total homes, were owned by negroes. The average area of these farms was 51·2 acres, as against 160·3 acres for the farms of white owners. Their aggregate value was over £30,000,000, or, say, £134 per farm, as compared with £804 for the whites. If we consider for each race the per capita value of the farm property owned by its members, we find that for the negroes it was £11, whereas for the whites it was £60. The annual products of farms owned by negroes amounted to about £10,000,000. For all farms operated by them the annual products amounted to about £50,000,000, although it should be noted that, in view of the tenant system so prevalent throughout the black belt, many operators are in reality little more than farm labourers. Nevertheless there is encouragement in the fact that the landowner class, although small, is rapidly increasing, the last census showing that, for the decade ending 1900, the number of owners had increased by over 50 per cent. When we turn to gainful occupations other than farming, the position is less satisfactory, the great majority being engaged in common labour and various forms of service, and showing little tendency to advancement. A small minority, however, present a very creditable record. Those classed as teachers and college professors, representing 0·5 per cent. of the total negro workers, showed an increase of about 41 per cent. during the last decade, as compared with an increase of 18 per cent. in the general negro population. Clergymen, representing a somewhat smaller percentage of the breadwinners, increased by about 28 per cent. during the same period. Only about 7 per cent. of the total workers were engaged in skilled and semi-skilled occupations, and their standard was undoubtedly considerably below that of the whites. In mining and quarrying, which gave employment to about 0·9 per cent., the number employed increased by about 90 per cent. This, however, was largely due to the expansion of phosphate and other open pit mining, and is not to be taken as reflecting the capacity or interest of the race in skilled mining as usually understood. Carpenters and joiners showed an actual decrease. Tobacco and cigar factory operatives increased by 2·3 per cent., as against an increase of 21·1 per cent. for the whites. As brick and stone masons the negroes gained rapidly, increasing by 47·4 per cent.

as compared with a decrease of 3·2 per cent. for white masons. In iron and steel works negro operatives increased by 87·4 per cent., while white operatives increased by 29·8 per cent. The gain was largely due to expansion in the Southern States, and there is some uncertainty as to whether it will be maintained, the present tendency being to displace negroes with more highly-paid whites. As engineers and firemen the negroes also showed a comparative gain over the whites, although but slight and of doubtful significance in view of the nature of the positions filled. In blacksmithing the negroes lost ground, decreasing by about 8 per cent. as compared with a gain by the whites of about 9 per cent. Generally speaking, the gains of the race in the direction of skilled and semi-skilled labour seem to have been in those occupations calling for least initiative. It is to be noted that the percentages just referred to are somewhat misleading in that for a given occupation the positions reported as filled by negroes are comparatively of less importance and greater instability than for the whites. Also that, for the negroes, the percentage engaged as breadwinners (breadwinner being defined as a person of either sex, 10 years old or over, who may have been directly engaged in gainful labour during any part of the census year) is not only larger than for the whites (62·2 per cent. : 48·6 per cent.), but is unduly increasing, and includes relatively more children and mature females. Finally, on this subject, we may say that, taking the industrial position of the negroes as a whole, it is difficult to avoid the conclusion that progress is still very much handicapped by inherited characteristics. It is true that in agriculture and amongst the superior classes there has been considerable advancement and a creditable accumulation of wealth. But, as against this advancement of a small minority, we have to recognise in the masses retroactive tendencies of possibly overwhelming force; and, as against the evidence of increasing wealth, we have to recall that such evidence is by no means an exact measure of race progress, since, to a large extent, it is due to natural advancement in the value of property acquired more or less haphazardly at the close of the war when prices were very low. We have also to recall that the older generation of ex-slaves exerted an important influence on the question of wealth, as well as on the general stability of the race, for amongst them were many better-class negroes, who, as a result of their previous training, were able to bring to bear, at least during their own generation, habits of thrift which there is reason to fear may not persist in their children. The conclusion of Tillinghast is that "Economic freedom has not developed a sense of responsibility and a persistent ambition to rise, as many hoped to see. As a race the negroes are still wanting in energy, purpose and stability; they are giving way before the able competition of whites in the skilled and better paid occupations; and they fail to husband resources so as to establish economic safety."

Possibly, the experience of a negro community under what would seem to have been exceptionally favourable circumstances may be of interest in this connection. In 1849 a colony was started by an English clergyman in Ontario. A large tract of fertile land was set aside by the Canadian Government for the use of fugitive slaves who had been assisted to escape from the Southern States by the "underground railroad." These people were presumably of exceptional calibre, otherwise they would not have had the incentive or hardihood to face such an experience. Furthermore, they were to enjoy the advantages of an environment which offered much of sympathy and encouragement. The land was sold to them at a low price in farms of from 40 to 100 acres, and unlimited time was given for payment. At one time 1,200 negroes were settled in this colony. A certain degree of financial assistance was given, and, aside from the opportunities of agriculture, it was possible to make money by cutting the fine timber which stood on portions of the land. The colony, therefore, started under auspicious circumstances. How has it prospered? Very few of the negroes or their descendants now remain on the farms, and, with one exception, those who remain are tenants. The others mortgaged their lands and even standing crops, squandered the proceeds, and in many cases abandoned the ground rather than take the trouble to till it. They proved incapable of steady work, and were without foresight, their power of provision being limited, apparently, to but a day or a week. When oil was discovered on their lands they sold their rights at once for trivial sums rather than wait for the development of this subterranean wealth. Surely this is a discouraging record.

In the matter of social and religious progress the history of the negroes since slavery has been even more disappointing than in industrial affairs. It emphasises the impossibility of altering by legislation alone the more intimate relations of life. Especially is this true with regard to social relations, for we find that, notwithstanding the statutory guarantee of equality, and the kindly disposition of the white race generally, there has been an increasing tendency toward racial segregation. This, no doubt, is to some extent due to innate antipathy on the part of the whites, but, even so, it is but the natural outcome of fundamental differences as to temperament, instincts, and traditions. Under slavery, these differences did not operate so strongly toward dissociation as since, for then the superior position of the whites was tacitly recognised and it was possible to encourage a degree of intimacy and bring to bear social and religious influences of an exemplary as well as of a restraining nature. With the grant of freedom, the situation was radically changed. The negroes were then at liberty to follow their own inclinations. These, too frequently, were at variance with the practices and former teachings of the whites, and, inevitably, each race withdrew more and more to itself, the initiative coming no less from the blacks than from the whites. Thus there has developed a state of social isolation for the negroes. They are of the nation, but separate and apart from the social life of the whites, and, in most respects, less and less subject to their influence. A more stable and mature race, such, for instance, as the Chinese or Japanese, may hold its own under such restrictions, but for the negroes the trial has been a severe one, and the outcome is still a matter of grave concern. If we consider family life we find the sense of fidelity and responsibility but weakly developed. There is still notable indifference to the institution of marriage, disregard of its obligations, and unconcern as to the future of offspring. Illegitimacy is common and rapidly increasing, statistics showing for various communities from 12 to 27 per cent. of the younger generation with but a vague idea as to parentage. One writer ironically remarks that his figures are probably an underestimate in view of a tendency in some instances to conceal the fact. Under such circumstances there can be but an imperfect conception of family responsibilities, and it is not surprising that all writers note the absence of family affection and sustained, well-directed, parental training of children. All this, no doubt, is largely due to the comparatively short experience of the race with monogamic family life, and to the sudden removal of the restraints to which they were subjected under slavery. In other words, they are not yet sufficiently advanced in the scale of civilisation to be equal to the exercise of voluntary self-restraint. But, no matter how we explain it, the fact remains; and it is of vital significance to the race. Its consequences are shown in part by the rapid increase of crime. For the decade ended 1890 the increase of negro prisoners was in the Southern States 29 per cent. greater than the increase in negro population, and in the Northern States 39 per cent. greater. (Corresponding figures for the last census—1900—are not available.) A discouraging feature in this connection is the indifferent and even sympathetic attitude of the masses toward crime.

In their religious life we find evidence of the survival of the race's natural tendency to communal rather than family life. The negro church is essentially a social centre. As Professor Du Bois, a leader of the race, says: "The social life of the negro centres in his church—baptism, weddings and burial, gossip and courtship, friendship and intrigue—all lie within its walls." It reflects to a marked degree the preference of the race for the intercourse and recreations of the group rather than those of the family. Du Bois suggests that home life was destroyed by slavery, has struggled up since emancipation, and now is not so much threatened as neglected. But Tillinghast is probably nearer right when he asks, "How could slavery destroy a home life that had never existed for the race?" and further observes that, "It is not the negro home that has struggled up since emancipation, but the ancient racial habit of gregarious communal life, and this is growing to-day at the expense of private home life." Another notable feature of negro religious life is the failure to adapt moral conduct to religious professions. This, however, does not necessarily imply hypocrisy, but rather the survival of ancestral habits of thought which fail to identify conduct with religion. To the negro mind religion means abandonment to the emotions and a varying degree of mental exaltation. A description of a characteristic church service is as follows: "The preacher speaks very quietly for a few minutes, but gradually drifts into a vivid description of various thrilling Biblical scenes, such as Daniel in the lion's den, or Shadrack, Meschach and Abednego in the fiery furnace, and reaches a climax in seeing the pearly gates of the New Jerusalem. He moves rapidly from one side of the platform to the other, goes through various facial contortions, perspires freely, 'hollers,' and when the whole audience is swaying, moaning, surging and shouting under intense excitement, he suddenly drops his voice for a sentence and sits down exhausted." Certainly there is much of analogy as between this description and a typical African religious dance. It is hardly necessary to say that these remarks are intended to apply only to the great mass of the negroes and do not reflect the religious state of the comparatively few who have risen to a position of distinct superiority. But, as Professor Straton has said, "We must not confuse the rapid development of exceptional individuals, with the evolution of the race. Picked individuals, strengthened often in mental vigour by infusions of white blood, may grow rapidly: but the evolution of the race comes slowly—a part of each new element of strength being transmitted to succeeding generations."

It is not a matter of decades but of centuries. The negro race as a whole, however, may go forward higher yet in outward forms, but still deep down beneath may lie the tendencies which give colour to the fear that they are a decaying people."

With regard to negro education it must be admitted that the American system was in the first instance founded on error. The error, however, extended to the whites as well, for, at the time of emancipation, the idea that education, especially for a primitive people, should involve hand and heart as well as mind was not generally accepted. Under such circumstances it is not strange that the first efforts toward negro education proved abortive. The consequent disappointment was due largely to the failure of those in authority, chiefly Northern idealists, to recognise the fundamental inferiority of the negro. With the best of intentions, educators worked on the assumption that all the black man required was the white man's opportunities. Their aim, therefore, was to supply these opportunities, and the fact that the great mass of the negroes could not assimilate with advantage the instruction offered was overlooked. The counteracting influence of an unfavourable home and industrial environment, which became more accentuated with the removal of the restraints imposed by slavery, was also overlooked. Consequently, the results were very unsatisfactory. There was at first marked evidence of interest, but, as soon as the novelty of a new situation had lost its charm, there was general indifference and a disposition to return to the old life.

In this connection, and as calculated to prevent premature conclusions as to the significance of the present educational activity amongst South African natives, the following remarks by Booker Washington are of interest:—"Few people who were not right in the midst of the scenes can form any exact idea of the intense desire which the people of my race showed for an education. As I have stated, it was a whole race trying to go to school. Few were too young, and none too old, to make the attempt to learn. As fast as any kind of teachers could be secured, not only were day schools filled, but night schools as well. The great ambition of the older people was to try to learn to read the Bible before they died. With this end in view, men and women who were fifty or seventy-five years old would often be found in the night school." Again, "In every part of the South, during the Reconstruction period, schools, both day and night, were filled to overflowing with people of all ages and conditions, some being as far along in age as sixty and seventy years. The ambition to secure an education was most praiseworthy and encouraging. The idea, however, was too prevalent that, as soon as one secured a little education, in some unexplainable way he would be free from most of the hardships of the world, and, at any rate, could live without manual labour. There was a further feeling that a knowledge, however little, of the Greek and Latin languages would make one a very superior human being, something bordering almost on the supernatural."

Gradually, however, a better conception of education obtained, and the importance of instilling new habits and ideas along with intellectual culture was more clearly recognised. This conception was first developed at Hampton Institute, and subsequently at Tuskegee and other schools less generally known. It may briefly be described in the words of Dr. Frissell, the present principal of Hampton, who says of his school: "The Hampton School has its workshops as well as its school-rooms, its farms and sawmills as well as its church. It is really an industrial village where a thousand young people are being trained in life's industries. Commencing in the kindergarten, the children are instructed in the use of the wash-tub and the ironing table, the hoe and the rake, as well as in music and reading. The work habit—love for the labour of the hand is created and cultivated throughout the whole course. Every boy is taught agriculture, work in wood, iron and tin, as well as history, geography, mathematics and other subjects." The results of such a policy are shown by the thousands of graduates who have returned to their people and are endeavouring to stay the downward tendency of the masses. Whether or not their accumulating influence will ultimately be of sufficient force to reverse the general tendency is still an open question. It is by no means certain that, because a few schools of this type have accomplished excellent results with comparatively few pupils, similar results could be achieved for the race generally by merely multiplying the institutions. The problem is not so simple. We have to recall that so far students have not been representative. In their selection the most rigid principles of exclusion have been exercised, as is shown by the following requirements of Hampton:—

"SOUND HEALTH, testimonials of GOOD CHARACTER, and intention to remain through the course, are required of all applicants. Candidates for admission coming from common schools or from other institutions, must present letters of honourable dismissal and of recommendation. . . .

Able-bodied, capable young men of good character are encouraged to apply for admission on the following terms:—

1. To work steadily all day for at least an entire year from the time of entering, and attend night school for two hours five nights a week.

NOTE.—No one need apply who is not well and strong and capable of doing a man's or woman's work. None under seventeen years need apply. . . .

3. The first three months are probationary. . . .

The utmost economy is expected from the students, in order that they may accumulate money for their expenses in the day school."

This certainly is a searching test, one that can be met by but a relatively insignificant minority of the coloured youth. Furthermore, we must not forget that the great majority of this small minority are mulattoes. On these men, however, hangs the fate of the negro in America. If they can remain faithful to the high standard to which they have aspired, gradually growing in numbers and force and bringing to bear their influence on the masses so as to provide a small measure at least of the training which has meant so much for them, the present tendency to general reversion may be retarded and possibly corrected. But the task is a stupendous one. It is not merely a question of teachers and schools, although the difficulties in these directions are so far insurmountable. They have to deal with the inherent incapacity of their people, and, even with ample teachers and schools and compulsory attendance of children, it is by no means certain that they will be able to overcome this retroactive factor.

Finally, we have to consider the influence on the American negro of political equality. This right was conferred soon after the war, partly in response to misguided Northern sentiment, and partly because those in authority felt that it offered the best means of securing him the freedom which had been granted. That he was ill-fitted to exercise the right is now patent to all. That a system involving political as well as industrial apprenticeship would, at least ideally and under more settled conditions, have been better suited to his limited capacity may also be admitted. Under the circumstances then prevailing, however, and especially in view of the disturbed state of white society at the time, it is difficult to see how any other course could have been adopted. Its adoption, of course, has meant much of serious significance to both races. To the Southern whites, it has meant all the trials and hardships arising out of the political dominance of the negro which followed the war, not the least of which was the necessity, which became more and more apparent, of overcoming this dominance once the protection of Northern troops was withdrawn. This was effected, first by arbitrary and not unquestionable means, and subsequently by State franchise qualification laws which, without undue hardship on either race, have resulted in the elimination of a large percentage of the coloured vote in consequence of its inability to meet the tests imposed. To the great mass of the negroes, the grant of political equality has so far proved at best a questionable benefit. Lacking in experience of free government, and without that individual political capacity so essential to its success, they were not only unable to grasp its true significance, but, because of their inherent deficiency in foresight and self-command, were deplorably unfitted to withstand incidental temptations to abuse its privileges. To them there was but one political issue at the close of the war—unrestrained freedom. Rightly or wrongly, they conceived that this was still endangered, and therefore ranged themselves on the side of the political party which had been instrumental in bringing it about. Too frequently, their first political lessons were learned from Northern adventurers or local political demagogues, whose interests were in the main selfish and whose example was calculated to debase rather than elevate. This first experience was most unfavourable, and its adverse influence has undoubtedly been far-reaching, although, naturally, opinion will differ as to the extent to which it has operated. In considering this circumstance, however, we should not lose sight of the fact that, apart from its direct bearing, we have also to recognise the indirect bearing of the serious accompanying consequences which arose through alienation of the sympathy of the better-class Southern whites. These were the people best fitted to guide the race politically at so critical a period, and, although at the time and under the circumstances it no doubt would have seemed a counsel of perfection to suggest their whole-hearted co-operation, still, to us of to-day, it appears that, on the whole, the negroes would have been much better off if left in large measure to the guidance of their former masters, aided in so far as possible by friendly financial assistance from the North. This was not to be, however, and so we find the white Southerners soon after the war in open hostility to the negroes, endeavouring by every means, fair or unfair, to overcome the political supremacy of those who but recently had been their slaves, and who, because of fundamental unfitness and ill-chosen leadership, were now indulging in insufferable excesses and shameless distortions of government. First by intimidation and fraudulent manipulation of the ballot, and later by the aid of State enactments restricting the suffrage of both whites and blacks to those able to meet certain educational and property tests, the application of which is mainly in the hands of the whites, the negro voter has been largely deprived of his political rights where opposed to the general welfare, and is now no longer an element of danger. Doubtless this policy is an evasion of the original spirit of the constitutional guarantee of equality, and admittedly it is ethically objectionable, but we have to interpret it in the light of practical politics, and to regard it as one of those unavoidable compromises which have throughout history had to be made in the pursuit of the ideal. From this standpoint, and also because it is hoped that any accompanying hardships on the negro may be but temporary and on the whole for his good, the attitude of the Northern States is at least tolerant, and, despite the phrasing of political platforms, it is improbable that any unpleasantness will result. Furthermore, this solution has been accepted by many of the more enlightened negroes, and there is a growing disposition on the part of the leaders of the race to regard the free exercise of the franchise as a sequence rather than an antecedent to educational and, especially, industrial proficiency. Booker Washington, in a recent address to the National Negro Business League, when emphasising the importance of an industrial and pacific spirit, rather than the political and assertive spirit of that branch of negro opinion headed by Du Bois, said: "The more I study our conditions and needs the more I am convinced that there is no safer road by which we can reach civic, as well as moral, educational and religious development, than by laying the foundation in the ownership and cultivation of the soil, the saving of money, commercial growth, and the skilful and conscientious performance of any duty with which we are entrusted." It would therefore seem that the question of the negro's fitness for full participation in the politics of his country should be regarded as dependent on and, in so far as possible, consequent to the development of capacity in industrial and social affairs. We have seen that in America the outlook in these directions is at best indeterminate for the great mass of the race, and, accordingly, we must conclude that there is little reason for anticipating for the negroes an early exercise of political influence corresponding to their numerical strength.

In the foregoing remarks the aim has been to touch briefly on the main factors in connection with the negro's experience in America, limiting the discussion more particularly to considerations open to South African application. With regard to the future of the negro in America, therefore, it is necessary to make but a few concluding observations. Generally speaking, the outlook for the great mass seems distinctly discouraging. There is much evidence pointing to gradual reversion, and reversion, under the circumstances, would ultimately mean extinction. This, of course, does not apply to that comparatively small minority of notable and admirable men who are making a most creditable showing. This class is bound to increase in numbers and influence, and it is in these men, assisted by a favourable environment, as well as by the example and stimulating competition of the whites, that we must repose such hope as we may be able to command for the welfare of the great majority. Through them educational opportunities, based on the principles previously discussed, are being extended. Social influences of a helpful character are also being brought to bear with increasing effect. And, what is perhaps of even more significance, industrial life, especially in the direction of agriculture, is being stimulated and expanded. Another favourable influence is the growth of the temperance movement in the Southern States. Starting with Local Option Laws, public opinion, both white and black, has developed under the stimulus of periodical discussion until now three States are effectively exercising total prohibition of the liquor traffic, and others are rapidly advancing to similar action. This undoubtedly means much for the negroes. How much is suggested, although, of course, not finally demonstrated, by the fact that in certain cities of large negro population the number of arrests has been reduced from one-third to one-half after only a few months' operation under the law. The question that has to be faced, however, is whether, with all assistance that the circumstances will permit, it is possible to stay the retrograde tendency manifest in the race as a whole. This question is not entirely one of the helping hand. No doubt the absence of aid and opportunity means much to thousands, but it does not follow that, because a comparatively small number of exceptional individuals has responded to these advantages, the millions of the masses will do so likewise. In considering these we have always to keep in mind the forces of hereditary instinct, and the evidence, which in this paper has been but briefly submitted, as to the inherent disposition of the race to resist progress. We have also to keep in mind the growth of immorality, loose and irresponsible family relations, intemperance and criminality, factors whose unfavourable influence is being greatly accentuated by a rapidly developing preference for urban life. These tendencies are inimical to survival, especially in the midst of an aggressive white population; in fact, their adverse bearing is already reflected in the race's disproportionate rate of increase, the census returns indicating that the death-rate of negroes is about double what it is for white, and that in the Southern States the decline in the proportion of children to women of child-bearing age, has, during the past twenty years, been about twice as great for negroes as for whites. It is, therefore, difficult to avoid the feeling that in America at least the outlook for the negro is at best precarious.

When we come to consider the native in South Africa, we are at once faced with the question whether there are grounds for taking a more hopeful view of his ultimate fate than is permissible in America. On this question, of course, opinions will differ. For the furtherance of discussion, however, I submit that, in the main, the natural inheritance of the black man in Africa is not materially different from what it is in America, and that, therefore, we may reject all humanitarian influences that may be brought to bear as of secondary importance, and say that his vigorous survival is primarily dependent upon the degree of white competition he may have to encounter. That even under the most aggressive competition some should survive, and that these, as in America, would in the aggregate total many thousands, also that retrogression of the masses would be gradual and accompanied by much blending of colour, goes without saying. But, for the natives as a race, it would seem that normal survival is chiefly dependent on restricted competition, and this in turn is dependent on the commercial significance of the country's natural resources, more especially in the direction of agriculture. So long as the country itself is unable to compete effectively with other countries for the favour of the emigrant, the Kaffir will probably survive and progress, although after an inferior fashion and with a continuance of his retroactive influence on the white population. On the other hand, should the country's resources prove of such importance as rapidly to attract an immigrant population of good type, then it is probable that the cumulative influence of the whites would gradually overwhelm the native race and lead ultimately to its elimination except as to the more capable and those who might find sanctuary in some place set apart.

Obviously these conclusions are somewhat academical and leave untouched many practical and less remote questions which have to be dealt with. To go further, however, would open up the racial and economic problems of South Africa in all their complications and involve discussion which may well be left to abler hands. The paper, therefore, is submitted merely for its suggestive value.

The headings to the columns in the above table may be explained as follows :

1. "Annual amount at Union Sea Rates."

The Washington Convention fixed a maximum rate (so much a kilo-gram) which countries or their shipping lines could charge for the transport of mails belonging to other countries, and if the South African mails were charged for at this rate the amounts that the various Colonies and Great Britain would have been called upon to pay during 1906 would have been as shown in column 1.

2. "Annual gross contribution."

As a matter of fact, when tenders for the carriage of mails between England and South Africa were called for, the Union-Castle Company offered their services for £135,000 (an amount considerably less than what the cost would have been under Postal Union rates). The proportions of this sum borne by the various Colonies and Great Britain are shown in column 2.

3. "Less share of Pool."

The expenses of the mail service are paid out of a pool, managed by the Cape Town Post Office authorities. Each of the Colonies and Great Britain pays in a fixed sum monthly, and, in addition, the pool receives contributions from various foreign countries (who are charged for the use of the service at Postal Union rates) and a proportion (representing the charge for sea transport) of the amounts charged on parcels. The Union-Castle Company receives no benefit from the moneys obtained from these sources, the £135,000 being considered as paying for the whole mail accommodation.

4. "Net contribution."

The actual contribution which the South African Colonies are called upon to pay is consequently £135,000 less whatever may have been received during the year from foreign countries or on account of carriage of parcels, and the proportions of this amount payable by the Colonies and Great Britain are shown in column 4.

XVII.—THE MANAGEMENT AND CONTROL OF STATE RAILWAYS IN THE AUSTRALIAN COLONIES.

Originally the State railways in the Australian colonies were under the control of ministers, whose retention of office depended upon their retaining the confidence of Parliament. The effect of this system was that to all intents and purposes the railways were in the hands of the particular party that happened to be in power in each State.

It is unnecessary here to indicate all the evil results of political interference in the management of railways. They are especially apparent in two respects, first in hampering the institution of a proper system of rates and secondly in undermining discipline and consequently rendering good administration impossible. In the Australian Colonies, where the power of organised labour is unusually strong, the results of political influence in this direction have been particularly noticeable. In Western Australia in 1902, two strikes of the railway employees resulted in the retirement of the General Manager and the concession of the men's demands. The experience of the Australian Colonies pointed to the fact that the railways could be more efficiently administered if placed under the control of individuals uninfluenced by political considerations, and free generally to carry on their administration on business lines. The result was the establishment of the Commissions here described.

The first Commission was established in Victoria in 1884. Its example was followed in 1887 by South Australia, in 1888 by New South Wales and Queensland, and in 1889 by New Zealand. In West Australia, where responsible Government came much later, the system was not inaugurated until 1902. With the exception of New Zealand, where in 1895 a reversion was made to the ordinary system of Ministerial control, this method of administering the railways through Commissions still continues.

In the first instance the number of individuals constituting the Commission was usually three, the Chairman, however, having the power to override his colleagues in case of a difference of opinion, subject only to the provision that the whole case must be submitted for the information of Parliament. Since then, however, there has been a tendency to reduce the personnel of the Commission to one. In Queensland and West Australia there are now single Commissioners. In South Australia there is one Commissioner, who is assisted by a Board of Advice, consisting of the Engineer-in-Chief, the General Traffic Manager and the Locomotive Engineer; and here it is provided that the Minister shall settle any cases where the Commissioner is opposed to the unanimous opinion of the Board. In New South Wales, although nominally there are three Commissioners, one is a Chief Commissioner and the others, who are called Assistant Commissioners for Railways and Tramways respectively, are under his control.

The only exception to this principle is the Colony of Victoria, where the original arrangement still holds good, having been re-introduced in 1903, after an interval of seven years during which only one Commissioner held office.

It is the general rule that the Commissioners cannot be removed during their term of office except for misbehaviour or incompetence, and then only on a resolution of both Houses of Parliament.

The powers of the Commissioners are statutory and can therefore be withdrawn in whole or in part by Act of Parliament.

It will be seen therefore that the States of New South Wales, Victoria, Queensland, South Australia and Western Australia have placed the management of their railways under the control either of a Board of Commissioners or one Commissioner. The Commissioners are for all local purposes looked upon as the owners of the railways and can sue and be sued in their corporate name. Practically everything that comes within the scope of management is placed within the power of the Commissioners.

The Commissioners are subject to the general control of Parliament, as are other departments, and Parliament's authority rests partly on the fact that the statutory powers of the Commissioners may be by Act withdrawn and partly on the fact that all moneys required for the working of the railways must be annually voted by Parliament. But there is this difference that other departments are administered by a Minister, who holds office only so long as he possesses the confidence of Parliament, whereas the railway departments, so far as the Commissioners' statutory powers are concerned, are administered by officers who hold office for a lengthy term and are only removable under exceptional circumstances.

So far as the executive Government, as distinct from Parliament, is concerned, there are certain statutory powers which the Commissioners can exercise without reference to it; others, e.g., the making of bye-laws and rates, for which the covering authority of the executive Government is required. But it is stated that in practice the Minister does not interfere in the management of railways although the control of Parliament and the Government over the Commissioners is real. In the exercise of their statutory powers the Commissioners could decline to adopt the recommendations of the executive Government.

It has already been stated that the Commissioners carry out practically the whole management of railway matters without interference. It may however be useful to give the following summary, which is not intended to be exhaustive but merely illustrative, of the powers of Commissioners in New South Wales under the Government's Railways Act of 1901 as amended by Act of 1906, the provisions of which are generally typical of those of the Acts of other Colonies.

The Chief Commissioner has authority to carry out the terms of the Act and is a body corporate and capable of suing and being sued and has power to take purchase, sell, lease, and hold lands, goods, chattels, and other property for the purposes of this Act. Every sale or lease must receive the approval of the Governor.

The Chief Commissioner and two Assistant Commissioners hold office for seven years. They are eligible for re-appointment.

The Chief Commissioner may be suspended from office by the Governor for misconduct or incompetence, but shall only be removed by resolution of both Houses of Parliament.

All railways, rolling stock, piers, yards, buildings, land for railways, and all apparatus used in connection with the railways are vested in the Chief Commissioner.

All moneys appropriated by Parliament for the maintenance or management of the railways are expended under the control and management of the Chief Commissioner. All moneys payable to the Chief Commissioner must be paid into the Consolidated Revenue Fund and audited in the same way as other Government moneys are audited.

Special powers are granted to the Chief Commissioner:—

- (1). With regard to deciding the position, character, etc., of all stations and other works on new lines of railway, whether constructed or not by the Commissioner.
- (2). With regard to depots and contracts for loading and unloading goods.

- (3). With regard to requisitioning to the Minister for additional stores, plant, material, rolling stock, etc.
- (4). With regard to leasing refreshment rooms, sheds, offices, etc.
- (5). With regard to providing for the carriage of dangerous goods.
- (6) With regard to working telegraphs, etc.

The Chief Commissioner is also granted general contractual powers in respect of all matters necessary for enabling him to carry the purposes of the Act into full effect.

The Chief Commissioner may demand reasonable tolls for the carriage of passengers and goods. But "subject to the provisions of this Act all such tolls shall, at all times, be charged equally to all persons, and after the same rate, whether per ton, per mile, or otherwise, in respect of all passengers and of all goods or carriages of the same description, and conveyed or propelled by a like carriage or engine passing over the same portion of the line of railway and under the same circumstances; and no reduction or advance in any such tolls shall be made, either directly or indirectly in favour of or against any particular company or person travelling upon or using the railway."

Various other provisions are made with regard to the payment of tolls and penalties for non-payment.

The Chief Commissioner is also allowed to frame a special scale of tolls or charges for the conveyance of specific classes of produce or merchandise, provided that the same charges are applied alike to all persons using the railways.

Other special duties are laid on the Commissioners, such as that of maintaining the railways in a state of efficiency, of carrying out any work necessary therefor, of not giving any undue or unreasonable preference to any particular person or description of traffic, of preparing estimates of traffic over any suggested new line, and of submitting a quarterly report to the Minister with regard to the state of traffic returns, general condition of the lines, special rates which have been made, accommodation for the traffic, and the appointment and removal of officers. These reports have to be laid before Parliament.

The Chief Commissioner has also to prepare an annual report to be laid before Parliament and estimates in such form as the Governor may direct.

Further duties with regard to free passes and investigation of accidents are laid on the Chief Commissioner. He is also entitled to make bye-laws, on all matters concerning the management of the railway. They are set out in detail in the Act, but all such bye-laws have to be approved by the Governor and be published in the Gazette.

The next part of the Act deals with the appointment, promotion, discipline in and regulation of the railway service. It is sufficient for the purposes of this memorandum to state that the Chief Commissioner has general power to appoint, promote and dismiss all officers and to pay such salaries, wages and allowances as are appropriated by Parliament.

The Commissioners are a Court of Appeal for complaints with regard to promotion. All other appeals such as appeals against dismissal or reduction for misconduct, are heard by a board, consisting mainly of heads of departments. There is, however, an appeal from this board to the Commissioners.

The Chief Commissioner has the power to make regulations on the various matters respecting the conditions of service of the staff, and all such regulations, when confirmed by the Governor, are of force and effect. But any regulation in any way altering or annulling any privileges or immunities of officers or dealing in any way with hours of work or wages must be published in the Gazette.

The purport of this and other Australian Railway Acts may be summarised as follows:—

The final power and authority and voting of estimates rests with Parliament, as it must in all cases, where Parliament is the supreme legislative authority.

The executive Government retains a certain power of supervision, especially over the issue of bye-laws and the imposition of rates and fares.

But the ordinary working and management of the railways is left wholly to the Commissioners.

The general opinion in Australia seems to be that the system of non-political control of its railways has proved a success. It has been possible to administer the railways in a more business-like manner. The fact that Commissioners are appointed for a term of years has secured a greater continuity in management than could have been possible under the old conditions, and the discipline of the employees has been considerably improved thereby. This can easily be understood when it is remembered that in the colony of Western Australia there were within the space of four years, from 1901 to 1905, no less than nine ministers of railways.

There appears to be an intention on the part of the Commonwealth Government of applying a similar method of administration to the Australian Post Office.

The loss on working during 1904-5 was £32,687 19s. 8d., during 1905-6 £16,091 0s. 1d., and during 1906-7 £39,901 0s. 9d. If the amounts paid on account of pensions and gratuities are added, the loss amounts to £20,181 4s. 1d. in 1905-6 and £48,175 4s. 4d. in 1906-7.

The Auditor-General, in his Report for 1906-7, states that in view of the heavy decrease in Revenue and the fact that the Expenditure has not been proportionately reduced, the Board is not in a position at the present moment to meet its obligations out of funds legitimately at its disposal for Working and Maintenance purposes, for, although the account shows a balance of £3,769 5s. 10d. in favour of the Board, the amount of £19,195 10s. 10d. had been paid in excess of the receipts under the heading of Pensions, and shown in the Reconciliation as "Amount due by Pension Funds." There was thus an actual debit balance on the 30th June, 1907, of about £15,426, which has, apparently, been temporarily covered by the absorption of the uninvested balances of the various Insurance Funds, viz. :-

Fire Insurance Fund	£288
Workmen's Compensation Insurance Fund	313
Depreciation Fund	16,224
	£16,855

† Vide Report of the Controller and Auditor-General on Vote 44 C., 1884-85.

The receipts under the head of Maintenance were £309,138 7s. 11d. in 1904-5, £231,568 13s. 8d. in 1905-6, and £207,471 9s. 7d. in 1906-7; and the Expenditure was £265,237 3s. 2d. in 1904-5, £223,182 18s. 1d. in 1905-6, and £205,752 1s. 0d. in 1906-7, leaving profits of £43,901 4s. 9d., £8,385 15s. 2d., and £1,719 8s. 7d. respectively.

The Auditor-General, in his Report for 1906-7, states—

Construction.—The amount of £22,389 17s. 0d. shown as expenditure under Works was composed of payments to Working and Maintenance in refund of expenditure incurred prior to the 30th June, 1906, but paid for in the first instance out of Revenue. There was no new expenditure on Construction during the financial year 1906-7, beyond the payment of £8,288 15s. 11d. to the Treasurer in refund of Discount and Cost of raising the Loan under Act 50 of 1906. Of this amount £44 18s. 5d. was paid out of the unexpended balance on Acts account and £8,243 17s. 6d. out of Harbour Board Revenue, the latter being treated as a contribution from Maintenance for New Works.

The total debt amounted to £1,376,471 11s. 5d., which is made up as follows :—

The assets thus valued were, therefore, £37,633 more than the whole debt outstanding.

The Auditor-General, in his report for 1906-7, states—

The Board has been relieved of debt to the extent of £466,667 9s. 7d. and assisted out of the General Revenue to the extent of £389,725 15s. 7d., a total of £856,393 5s. 2d. Of this sum £488,460 8s. 10d. was in favour of the Construction Account, and £367,932 16s. 4d. in favour of the Maintenance Account.

The Debt for which the Harbour Board is now liable amounts to £963,173 15s. 1d.

The valuation of the Board's property on the 31st December, 1906, was stated to be £2,008,982, to which should be added the unspent balance on the 30th June, 1907, £51,737 15s. 11d., thereby increasing the amount of the Assets to £2,060,720, which is £1,097,546 in excess of the Board's debt, or £630,880 in excess of the whole debt for which the Colony is liable in connection with the Harbour.

As regards the Working and Maintenance Account, there was a decrease of £10,000 in Revenue as compared with last financial year, and, although the expenditure was also reduced by £15,000, there was a loss of £11,400 on the year's working. Consequently, although the year commenced with a surplus of Revenue over Expenditure of £1,095 12s. 1d. for the whole period of the Board's existence, viz., from 4th December, 1893, there was, on the 30th June, 1907, a deficit of £10,665 9s. 7d.

As a result of this state of affairs, the Board has been unable to refund to the Construction Account the value of stores issued and work performed on account of Maintenance amounting to £11,382 2s. 11d. and, although, in reply to my enquiries in April, 1907, it was promised that endeavours would be made to reduce the debt very shortly, it has since been increased. This is improper, for amounts provided by Act of Parliament for Construction purposes, and raised by loans on the security of the Public Revenue, are practically held in trust and should not be used even temporarily for ordinary works and maintenance purposes.

The Auditor-General of the Colony states in his Report for 1904-5 that "the relation of the Railway and Harbour Capital Accounts is now the subject of correspondence, and pending the final settlement of the question, the relative value of services rendered as between them cannot be accurately determined." No Profit and Loss Accounts were furnished for the years 1905-6 and 1906-7, but the Auditor-General estimates the loss for 1905-6 at £295,000, and for 1906-7 at £108,412.

STATEMENT
No. XVIII.—(contd.)

XIX.—RESOLUTIONS OF THE INTER-COLONIAL AGRICULTURAL UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA DEMANDING INTER-COLONIAL ACTION OR LEGISLATION.

Adopted at Pretoria at Conference, held on the 25th to 29th of July, 1904:—

Proposed by Mr. Pepworth. "That in the opinion of this Conference the time has arrived when the various Governments of South Africa should introduce an Inter-Colonial Scab Act."

Adopted at Conference held at Pietermaritzburg on 25th and 26th of October, 1905:—

"That this Conference deems it advisable that combined action should be taken by the various Governments of South Africa with regard to infectious and contagious diseases among stock."

"This Conference deems it desirable that a uniformly stringent Scab Law be enforced in each of the British Colonies of South Africa."

Proposed by Mr. Scott. "That this Conference confirms the principle of an Inter-Colonial Live-stock Marking Act."

Proposed by Mr. Mitchell. "That this Conference considers it necessary that united action should be taken by the South African Colonies in respect to the destruction of locusts."

Adopted at Cape Town at Conference held on the 30th and 31st of May, 1906:—

"That this Conference deems it advisable that combined action should be taken by the various Governments of South Africa with regard to infectious and contagious diseases among stock."

Proposed by Mr. Lee. "That this Conference is of opinion that a uniform Scab Act is desirable, but the local conditions in each colony make it a very difficult matter to arrange for such uniformity, and this Conference refers this question of a uniform Scab Act to the standing committee appointed to deal with stock diseases."

Proposed by Mr. Lee. "That this Conference, recognising that it is highly important that combined action should be taken in connection with contagious diseases, reaffirms the previous resolutions asking for action; and, further refers this question to the standing committee to be appointed to deal with stock diseases, with the recommendation that the various Governments be asked to make the regulations uniform, as far as possible."

"That this Conference confirms the principle of an Inter-Colonial Live-stock Marking Act."

Proposed by Mr. Robertson, and seconded by Mr. Malan. "That combined Inter-Colonial regulations be framed by the various Governments for the removal of stock from one colony to another, providing for inspection by responsible veterinary officers, the certificates issued by these officers to be recognised for Inter-Colonial purposes."

Adopted at Conference held at Pretoria on the 30th of September and 1st and 2nd of October:—

Proposed by Mr. Nicholson, seconded by Mr. A. G. Robertson. "That a central agricultural college for the whole of South Africa, supported by all colonies, would tend to promote very materially the development of the agricultural industry."

Proposed by Mr. A. G. Robertson, seconded by Mr. Nicholson. "That this Conference suggests that the various South African Governments be approached with the view to the appointment of an Inter-Colonial Commission for the purpose of framing Scab Laws, which shall be as far as possible on the same lines and uniformly stringent in each colony."

Proposed by Mr. Evans, seconded by Mr. A. H. Malan. "That this Conference wishes to draw the attention of the various Governments to the desirability of having uniform compulsory laws for the eradication of noxious weeds."

Proposed by Mr. H. H. Hards. "That this Conference is of opinion that the time has arrived when weights and measures should be made uniform throughout all the colonies of South Africa, and that the different Governments be approached to have this carried into effect by legislative enactment."

c.f. present arrangements in Cape and Natal in respect of licensing boards under liquor laws.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

National government to enact the law conferring on local authorities power to administer it and make bye-laws. National government would also maintain the primary standards, check those used by the local authorities and exercise supervision and power to act in default.	Local authorities to be responsible for administration of law and to have power of making bye-laws.
---	---

POUNDS AND BRANDS.

National government to enact the law conferring on local authorities power to administer it and make bye-laws. It would also maintain a central bureau where copies of all brand records taken by local authorities would be centralised.	Local authorities to appoint poundmasters, register brands, and make necessary bye-laws.
---	--

DEFENCE, POLICE AND PRISONS.

National government to control defence, police and prisons.	Large municipalities like Durban and industrial districts like the Rand might be allowed to control local police subject to government supervision, if half the cost were found from local taxation.
---	--

Note however, that local control of police in the Cape Colony had to be abolished. The system gave no opportunity for the abler men to rise to positions of command.

FUNCTIONS RELATING TO COMPOSITION OF SOCIETY.

National government to make all laws relating to coloured races.	Local authorities to exercise such powers of local administration and of making bye-laws as the national government may see fit to devolve on local authorities.
--	--

National government to administer:—

Immigration and registration of Asiatics.

Importation of labour.

Vacant Crown Lands.

Naturalization.

Census.

Registration of births, deaths and marriages.

Central bureau of vital statistics.

Local authorities to assist by refusing licences to unregistered Asiatics, and by reporting failures to register births and deaths.

PUBLIC HEALTH.

Law to be made by national government but wide powers of sub-legislation and administration to be delegated to local authorities. The national government to retain power to act in default, if any local authority permits conditions to exist which are a danger to persons within the jurisdiction of other authorities. The work of the national government would normally be confined to legislation, general inspection, and the compilation of statistics.

Local authorities to exercise all powers to administer and make bye-laws delegated by national government.

National government to appoint district surgeons, to exercise control over medical professions, chemists, etc.

National government to administer asylums for incurables, lunatics, and lepers.

Local authorities to retain responsibility for ordinary hospitals.

National government to administer laboratories and all research work, manufacture of vaccine sera.

Local authorities to dispense vaccine, sera, etc.

PREVENTION OF POVERTY.

General law to be made by national government which might delegate wide powers to local authorities to administer and make bye-laws.	Local authorities to be responsible for measures of relief and to exercise such powers to administer and make bye-laws for the prevention of conditions leading to poverty, as a national parliament may delegate.
--	--

LIQUOR LAW.

The National government to make the law and appoint chairmen of boards and certain other members. The law to grant such powers of local option as may seem desirable.	Local authorities to appoint remaining members of boards, and to exercise such powers of local option as may be assigned by law.
---	--

EDUCATION.

The national government to make the law and to deal direct with universities, university colleges, and institutions for the higher branches of education, technical or otherwise.	Local authorities to exercise such powers to administer and to make bye-laws as the national parliament may delegate, including all primary education and secondary education other than the higher branches.
---	---

The national government also to train teachers, inspect schools administered by local authorities, and have power to insist on maintenance of a certain standard of instruction.

COMMUNICATIONS.

National government to be responsible for:—

- Shipping.
- Lighthouses.
- Ports.
- Railways.
- Postal service.
- Oversea mails.

National government might grant subsidy in aid of construction and maintenance of main roads, pons and bridges, subject to right to insist on a certain standard of work.

Local authorities to be responsible for roads, pons and bridges.

PRODUCTION OF WEALTH.

National government to be responsible for laws and their administration, for the prevention of pests, etc., except such powers to administer and make bye-laws as the national government may delegate to local authorities.

Local authorities to exercise such powers to administer and make bye-laws in the matter of pests as the national government may delegate.

National government to be responsible for research, laboratories, experimental farms, higher agricultural colleges, training of teachers.

Local authorities to be responsible for agricultural teaching in primary schools, for ordinary agricultural colleges, and for model farms and the maintenance of experts to advise farmers.

National government to undertake manufacture of preventive and curative sera, large schemes of irrigation (especially on principal rivers) and administration of land bank.

Local authorities to undertake retail supply of curative sera, supply of sires for stock, and supply of trees for planting on farms. Local authorities also to provide expert advice on irrigation to farmers, and assistance in boring, etc.

National government to undertake afforestation of public estates.

FISHERIES.

National government to control conservation of sea fisheries and principal rivers.

Local authorities might be made responsible for streams entirely in territory of one local authority.

MINING.

National government to
be responsible for:—

Geological survey.

Research of all kinds.

Law and administration securing safety and health of public and employees, and prevention of theft.

MANUFACTURES.

National government to be responsible for:—

Research.

Promotion of manufactures whether by protection or bounties.

Factory legislation.

XXII.—SOURCES OF REVENUE.

XXII.—SOURCES OF REVENUE.

INTRODUCTORY MEMORANDUM.

The statement on the following pages is designed to show the various sources of Ordinary Revenue, and to describe each item, showing the persons by whom, or the things in respect of which, it is paid, the rate of the tax, duty, licence, etc., the laws under which it is derived, and the estimated revenue for the year 1907-8.

It is necessary to emphasize the fact that only "Ordinary Revenue" has been dealt with. The whole of the receipts of the various Colonies are not, therefore, included, the following items, for instance, being omitted :—

Extraordinary receipts (Orange River Colony and Transvaal only).

Receipts from loans, sinking fund receipts, trust funds, deposits and advances repaid.

The sinking fund receipts, other than voted moneys, consist of :—

(a) In Cape Colony—

- (i) Receipts from sales of Crown Lands.
- (ii) Unclaimed interest on the Public Debt.
- (iii) Unclaimed, drawn or expired debenture bonds or other Government stock.
- (iv) Proceeds of unclaimed property and stock.
- (v) Unclaimed deposits in the P.O. Savings Bank.
- (vi) Long outstanding Treasury drafts.
- (vii) Surplus interest on the administration of funds belonging to the P.O. Savings Bank.
- (viii) Proceeds of Customs rummage sales.
- (ix) Surplus interest and lapsed funds of the Guardians Fund.
- (x) Void Money Orders and unclaimed Postal Notes.

(b) In Natal—

- (i) Receipts on account of redemption of quitrents or moneys paid on conversion of leasehold land into freehold.

- (ii) Proceeds of certain sales under the Customs Acts.
- (iii) Interest on deposits in the hands of the Master of the Supreme Court.
- (iv) Proceeds of old Government stores or materials in connection with works of which the cost has been defrayed from loans.
- (v) Repayments of advances made by Government to the Indian Immigration Trust Board.
- (vi) Unclaimed expired Government debentures or stock.
- (vii) Unclaimed interest on the above.
- (viii) Unclaimed property or money in the hands of the Master of the Supreme Court.
- (ix) Unclaimed proceeds of pound sales.
- (x) Unclaimed Postal and Money Orders.

(c) In the Transvaal.—Half of the Government's share of the profits of diamond mines has to be devoted to the redemption of debt and up to the present has been employed in the redemption of the Selati Railway debentures.

It should be borne in mind that certain items which form part of the Government revenue of one Colony are in another allocated to local governing bodies. In Natal, for instance, the municipalities receive the revenue from certain trade licenses, which in Cape Colony are retained by the Government.

XXIII.—REVENUE COLLECTION.

XXIII.—REVENUE COLLECTION.

A. CAPE COLONY.

1. Customs Revenue. The revenue is collected by Collectors of Customs at Cape Town, Port Elizabeth and East London, and by Customs officers at Mossel Bay, Walfisch Bay and the minor ports. The Customs Department is also responsible for the registry of shipping and seamen and for other port and harbour work.

Five per cent. of the duty on in-transit traffic through Cape ports for other administrations in the Customs Union is retained for cost of collection.

The duty on oversea parcels is collected by the Post Office, which is allowed $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. commission.

2. Postal Revenue. Postal earnings (including telegraphs and telephones) are collected by the department itself.

3. Railway Revenue. This revenue is entirely collected by the Railway department.

4. All other Revenue. With the exception of the large revenue-earning departments already mentioned, the revenue is collected mainly through the agency of Civil Commissioners in the several districts of the Colony. These officials are also resident magistrates, except at Cape Town and Kimberley, where the fiscal and magisterial work is carried out by separate officers. Bank notes duty is collected direct by the Treasury; the import and export duty on diamonds by the Detective Department, Kimberley; forest revenue is partly collected by forest officials; revenue stamps and most of the smaller value licences are sold through the Post Office; and income tax collections in Cape Town are made by the chief clerk of the Income Tax Department.

No reliable estimate of the total cost of revenue collection can be given.

B. NATAL.

1. Customs Revenue. The revenue is collected by Customs officials at Durban, Pietermaritzburg, Port Shepstone, Charles-town, Newcastle, Union Bridge, Umtwavuna, Maputa, and Ingwavuna. The Customs Department is controlled by the Collector of Customs at Durban. Customs revenue from foreign parcels is collected by the Postmaster-General, and small amounts, chiefly on firearms, are collected by the Magistrates. Five per cent. of the duty on goods subsequently removed for consumption in the inland colonies is retained by Natal.

2. Postal Revenue. The whole of the earnings are collected by the Post Office.

3. Railway Revenue. This revenue is collected by officers of the Railway Department.

4. Port and Harbour Revenue. With the exception of wharf dues, which are collected by the Customs Department, and of rents from houses and land, which are collected by the Secretary to the Port Advisory Board, the revenue is collected by the Port Captain's Department.

5. All Other Revenue. Excise duty is, however, collected by the Customs Department; stamps for revenue purposes are sold by the Post Office; the remainder of the revenue being collected by the officers of the several departments who are charged with the duty. There is no internal revenue department, and Magistrates in county divisions are collectors of all kinds of revenue. The total cost of revenue collection has never been assessed.

C. ORANGE RIVER COLONY.

The Colonial Treasurer controls the collection of all revenues in the Colony through sub-accountants or collectors of revenue, directly responsible to him.

1. Customs Revenue. Most of the goods consigned to persons in the Colony enter through the ports of Natal and Cape Colony, the duty being collected by the latter Colonies and remitted to the Colonial Treasurer, after deducting 5 per cent. for cost of collection. In the case of goods imported under bond, duty is collected on local clearance. Customs officials are also stationed at recognised ports of entry on the border and at the principal railway stations in the Colony for the purpose of collecting the duty. The Customs staff is under the direction and control of the Collector of Customs at Bloemfontein. The Customs duty on oversea parcels is collected by the Post Office and remitted through the Customs Department to the Treasury.

2. Postal Revenue. Postal and Telegraphic earnings are collected by the Post Office.

3. All Other Revenues. With the exception of certain mining revenue, interest and dividends, and succession duty in the Bloemfontein district, which are paid direct into the Treasury, all other revenues are collected by the Resident Magistrates in the districts and by the Civil Commissioner in Bloemfontein.

No reliable estimate of the total cost of revenue collection can be given.

D. TRANSVAAL.

1. Customs Revenue. Under the Customs Union a large share of the Transvaal Customs Revenue is collected at the coast and then credited, and in due course remitted to the Transvaal with deduction of five per cent for costs of collection. Importers are, however, at liberty to bring up their goods under bond and pay the duty at the place of destination on clearance of the goods. This right is largely availed of and more than half of the Customs Revenue is collected in this way by means of the Customs Staff at Johannesburg, Pretoria and Germiston. There is also a Customs representative in a few other places, namely, Krugersdorp, Potchefstroom, Klerksdorp, Middelburg, Standerton, Volksrust and Komati Poort. In order to collect duty on imports by way of Lourenco Marques, a Customs Staff is also stationed at that place with the consent of the Portuguese Government. The entire Customs establishment is under the direction and control of the Director of Customs and the Head Office at Pretoria.

2. Postal Revenue. All earnings are collected by the department itself.

3. All other Revenues. All other revenues of the Transvaal are classed as Internal Revenue and placed under the care of the Internal Revenue Department. The Internal Revenues include the taxation derived from mines and mining rights, farms and township stands, rents, interest, etc., payable to Government; stamp duties and fees, taxes on trades and trading, on transfers of property and successions, and other miscellaneous sources. In the outside Magisterial Districts the local Magistrate acts as Revenue officer. There are, besides, Revenue Offices under a local official named Receiver of Revenue at Johannesburg and Pretoria, also at Boksburg for the Eastern Rand, and at Krugersdorp for the Western Rand. The local officials are responsible for securing and collecting all general Revenues accruing in their districts with the exception that at present mining licence monies are collected through the District Registrars of Mining Rights, and in the native areas of Zoutpansberg, Waterberg, Rustenberg and Marico, the taxes on Natives are collected by the Sub-Native Commissioners where such officers exist. The taxation on diamond mines, gold mines and other mines is, however, assessed and looked after from the chief offices of the Department in Pretoria. In addition the working of the Internal Revenue system and of all the branches of Revenue it includes is controlled and managed from the Head Office by the Chief Inspector of Revenues and his Staff.

D. TRANSVAAL.

Apart from the debt shown in the Inter-Colonial Council Statement, the Transvaal Government has undertaken the redemption of the Debentures issued by the Franco-Belgian Northern Railway Co. of the S.A.R. (Selati Railway), and guaranteed by the late S.A.R. These Debentures bear interest at the rate of 4%, also guaranteed. They originally amounted to £1,500,000, but during the financial year 1906-7 Debentures to the nominal value of £644,400 were paid off at £96 per £100 bond, leaving a balance outstanding on June 30, 1907, of £855,600 which, at £96 per £100 bond equals £821,376.

The £5,000,000 Loan authorised in 1907 is not here included, as this statement is only made up to June 30, 1907.

XXVI.—HEADS OF EXPENDITURE..

XXVI.—HEADS OF EXPENDITURE.

INTRODUCTORY MEMORANDUM.

This statement is the result of an attempt to classify the "Ordinary Expenditure" according to the objects to which it is devoted. The following expenditure is not included :—

(a) Cape Colony.

Expenditure under Acts of Parliament, i.e.,
Expenditure out of loans or from revenue not appropriated in the annual budget.

(b) Natal.

Expenditure out of Loans.

(c) Orange River Colony.

(i) Extraordinary expenditure out of accumulated balances in the Treasury, mostly consisting of the surpluses of receipts over ordinary expenditure.

(ii) Expenditure out of Loans.

(d) Transvaal.

(i) Extraordinary expenditure met from accumulated balances of revenue in the hands of the Colonial Treasurer.

(ii) Expenditure out of loans.

Sums shown in the estimates as appropriations-in-aid have not been deducted from the expenditure except in the case of railway refreshment branch receipts, arms and ammunition receipts and a few similar instances.

Expenditure by one government on behalf of another appears as expenditure of the government for which it is made, and is deducted both from the expenditure and from the receipts of the Colony making it. An example of this is the mail subsidy.

The five per cent. paid by the Colonies to each other for collection of customs duties is shown as expenditure, the revenue being increased by the same amount.

The expenditure under the various heads has been made as inclusive as possible, but the amounts given do not include printing and stationery, which forms a separate head, expenditure under "public works" (on new works, maintenance, repairs, rent, etc.), or (except in Cape Colony) postal, telegraphic and telephone services to the various departments, which are included under "Posts, Telegraphs and Telephones."

It is important to remember that duties which are undertaken in some colonies by the government are carried out in others by municipalities and other local bodies. The chapters dealing with police, education and local government should be consulted on this point.

It is difficult to draw from the figures on the following pages any conclusions as to whether too much or too little is being spent on any particular service. Considerable expenditure on equipment and development has been called for in the new colonies and the needs and circumstances of each country must be taken into consideration. The figures are simply designed to show how much of the estimated expenditure is appropriated to each head and what proportion of the total is involved in the case of each class. In order to provide the fullest opportunity for criticism, a table is published showing how the amounts are arrived at.

Little importance can be attached to figures comparing the expenditures of the various colonies per head of population and they have not therefore been worked out. The proportion of the total income of the nation taken for public expenditure would be a better test, but no figures of national income are available.

“Expenditure.....has to be judged by its object, i.e., by the benefits obtained in return for the sacrifices made.....That state organization is the best and really the cheapest which, all elements of the question being taken into account, gives the greatest amount of benefit to its citizens, and provides best for the future progress of the nation.” (Bastable, “Public Finance.”)

XXX.—LOCAL AUTHORITIES OF CAPE COLONY.

Divisional Councils, Act 40, 1889 (C.C.).

Each division, except the division of the Cape, is divided into six districts; each district, where possible, to comprise one or more field-cornetcy and to be distinguished by a number. The division of the Cape is divided into nine districts (special provisions).

Qualification of Voters in Divisional Council Elections.

(Section 17.)

- (1) Males of full age rateable as owners or lessees of immovable property within the division not in occupation of any occupier entitled to vote under the Act.
- (2) Males of full age who shall have been in occupation as occupier for twelve months, prior to date of framing voters' roll, of immovable property within the division of value (according to assessment roll) of not less than £75.

In case of joint occupiers, value must be not less than £75 for each person. If less than above, property shall for the purpose hereof be deemed to be unoccupied.

(Section 18.)

Disqualifications.

- (1) Persons in arrear with Divisional Council rates due and payable 3 (three) months before voting.
- (2) Conviction of infamous crime, &c., and corrupt practices unpardoned.
- (3) Persons not on voters' roll for time being.

Qualification of Councillors.

- (1) Male.
- (2) On voters' roll for the division.
- (3) Registered owner of immovable property worth £500, situated in such division.

(Usual disqualifications as to insolvency, &c.)

Councillors elected triennially.

Final audit of all Council accounts by the Controller and Auditor-General, after which they must be laid before Parliament.

Powers, duties and functions, etc., of Councils.

Every Council invested with power and charged with duty of making, maintaining, etc., all the divisional roads. All property in connection therewith vested in the Council. Power to take lands and material subject to compensation.

Governor has in respect of construction of main roads same powers and duties. Governor calls for tenders for construction of bridges on the line of main roads and then communicates the tenders to the Councils concerned for modification or acceptance. Council calls for and deals with tenders for bridges on the line of divisional roads, subject to Governor's sanction. Governor may direct inspection, order repairs, which if not carried out by Council may be carried out by the Governor at the expense of the Council.

Control of public outspans.

"Local authority" within meaning of Public Health Act.

May levy special rates as occasion may require for health purposes.

Management and control of pounds. Fix and receive pound fees.

Imposes tax on dogs.

Extirpation of Xanthium Spinosum and other noxious weeds and plants. (Aided from public revenue when expense exceeds £100 a year in a division.)

Assess rates on rateable property—to be applied to certain purposes.

Make bye-laws for carrying out purposes of the Act.

School Boards, Act 35, 1905 (C.C.).

Governor may constitute the whole or any portion of a Fiscal Division, or any magisterial area a school district.

Every such district is under the jurisdiction of a board of not less than six or more than eighteen members, as the Minister determines. Two-thirds of the members are elected by ratepayers and the remaining third are appointed by the Governor. Members may be of either sex and need not be ratepayers. Usual disqualifications as to insolvency, conviction, etc. Members hold office for three years. A School Board has the power of founding and establishing such undenominational schools as may be approved by the Department. The School Boards have control of all schools. The Boards have power to borrow money, subject in every case to the approval of the Department, for any of the following purposes :—

- (1) Purchase of a school site.
- (2) Building and erecting of a new school.
- (3) Enlargement or alteration of existing schools.
- (4) Levelling, etc., school grounds.

Members receive no payment for their services.

INSTRUCTIONS TO MAIN

Date.	CAPE COLONY.
	1878, amended 1904.
Communication of instructions to Executive Council.	Governor shall communicate the instructions to the Executive Council, and such others as he shall think fit.
Oaths	Governor may require any person to take Oaths of Allegiance or other oaths prescribed.
Executive Council ...	Executive Council must be summoned by the Governor. There must be two members besides Governor present.
President	Governor must preside. In his absence he must appoint a president. Otherwise senior officer presides.
Journals	Journals and Minutes must be kept and confirmed or amended at next sitting.
Governor guided by advice of Executive Council.	Except in unimportant matters, or matters too urgent to admit thereof, or under circumstances when the Governor may consider it prejudicial to His Majesty's service so to do, he shall in all cases consult with the Executive Council; but in all such urgent cases he shall as soon as possible acquaint the Council with his action and the reasons thereof. The Governor may, in his discretion, act in opposition to the advice of the Executive Council, but he must report the matter to His Majesty, with his reasons, by the first convenient opportunity.
Assent to, dissent from and reservation of Bills.	Government must be guided by following rules :— Different subjects are not to be mixed in the same law ; no Clause is to be introduced into a Bill foreign to what the title imports, and no perpetual clause is to be part of any temporary law. The following description of Bills are not to be assented to unless any such Bill contains a clause suspending operation until the signification of His Majesty's pleasure, or unless the Governor is satisfied there is urgent necessity for it, when he may assent thereto, unless repugnant to the law of England or inconsistent with treaty obligations :—

CAPE COLONY.
Crown Lands	...	Governor not to purchase Crown Lands without special permission.
Pardon	Before granting any pardon from a sentence of death the Governor to obtain from the Judge presiding at the trial of the offender a written report, which report is to be considered at the first meeting thereafter of the Executive Council, where the said Judge may be summoned to attend. The Governor may not pardon or reprieve, unless upon receiving the Council's advice it shall seem to him expedient; but he is in all cases to decide upon his own deliberate judgment, whether the Council concurs therein or otherwise, and if he should decide in opposition to the majority he shall enter his reasons at length upon the Council's Minutes.
Natives	...	Governor to do his utmost to promote religion and education among the natives and to protect themselves and their possessions.
Officers	...	Judges, Justices and other officers unless otherwise provided by law to be appointed during pleasure.
Blue Book	...	Annual Blue Book of returns and statistics to be sent to Secretary of State.
Absence	...	Governor not to absent himself without leave except to visit High Commissioner or Governor of neighbouring territory or province, and then not for more than one month for every year's service or more than a month at a time.

XXXIII.—QUALIFICATIONS OF VOTERS AND REGISTRATION.

XXXIII.—QUALIFICATIONS OF VOTERS.

	Cape Colony.	Natal.	O.R.C. and Transvaal.	Southern Rhodesia.
1. Age ...	He must be 21 years of age.	Same.	Same.	Same.
2. Nationality	He must be a British subject either born or naturalized.	Same.	Same.	Same, or, as an alternative, has recorded oath of intention to reside permanently in Southern Rhodesia and to bear true allegiance to the Crown.
3. Education	He must be able to sign his name and write his address and occupation.	No educational qualifications required.	No educational qualifications required.	Same as Cape.
4. Residence	No residential qualification required except as in 5 (b).	No residential qualification required except as in 5 (c).	Must have resided in (1) O.R.C. (2) Transvaal 6 months before registration, or, as an alternative, have resided for 6 months in Colony during last 3 years, even if he has been temporarily absent during 6 months previous to registration. Must be residing on date of registration in the division in which registration is demanded.	No residential qualification except as in 5 (b).
5. Property	(a) He must have been occupier of property worth £75 within the electoral division for which he seeks registration for twelve months; or as an alternative, (b) He must have been in receipt of salary or wages at the rate of not less than £50 per annum for 12 months provided that the person claiming to vote shall have resided within the last three months within the electoral division for which he claims registration.	(c) He must own immovable property worth £50 within the constituency; or as an alternative, (b) He must rent immovable property worth £10 per annum within the constituency; or as an alternative, (c) He must have resided 3 years in the Colony, and have income worth £8 per month.	No property qualification.	(a) He must have been occupier of property worth £75 within the electoral division for which he seeks registration for six months; or as an alternative, (b) He must have been in receipt of salary or wages in Southern Rhodesia at the rate of not less than £50 per annum for not less than 6 months; or as an alternative, (c) He must have been registered owner of a block of reef claims or of an alluvial claim, within electoral district.
6. Special ...	Persons on the register of voters in Griqualand West previous to its annexation to the Cape are qualified to vote even in the absence of the other qualifications.	Persons on the Utrecht and Vryheid Burgher Roll of South African Republic qualified to vote in absence of other qualifications.

A person fully qualified to vote on the above grounds may none the less be disqualified by any one of the following circumstances.

	Cape Colony.	Natal.	O.R.C. and Transvaal.	Southern Rhodesia.
1. Sex ...	Female Sex.	Female Sex.	Female Sex.	Female Sex.
2. Colour ...	No disqualification based on colour.	(a) Natives, including coloured people. The definition in this case has never been decided by any appeal to the Courts. Natives may not vote unless— (i) They have resided in the Colony for twelve years. (ii) Have been exempted from operation of Native Law for seven years. (iii) Have been recommended by three duly qualified European electors. (iv) Have thereafter received a certificate from the Governor, the grant or refusal of which lies in the discretion of the Governor in Council, entitling him to be registered as a Coloured Voter. (b) No persons may vote who are natives or descendants in the male line of natives of countries who have not hitherto possessed representative elective institutions founded on the Parliamentary franchise, unless they have obtained an order of exemption from the Governor in Council.	Franchise confined to white persons.	Same as Cape.
3. Military Employment.	No disqualification based on military service.	Same as Cape.	Must not be a person on full pay belonging to the British Regular Forces maintained by annual vote of British Parliament.	Same as Cape.
4. Incapacity	Lunacy.	No disqualification on ground of Lunacy.	No disqualification on ground of Lunacy.	Same as Cape.
5. Pauperism	No disqualification based on pauperism.	Same as Cape.	Must not have received relief from public funds otherwise than by way of repatriation under terms of peace or in a public or semi-public hospital.	Same as Cape.
6. Crime ...	(a) Conviction and sentence for murder and treason unless a free pardon has been granted. (b) Conviction and sentence for rape, theft, fraud, perjury, forgery unless a free pardon has been granted, or unless five years have elapsed since the expiration of his sentence.	(a) Same as Cape. (b) Same as Cape, except that free pardon essential. Mere lapse of time does not remove the bar.	(a) Same as Cape, save that conviction for treason previous to June 1st, 1902, does not disqualify. (b) Same as in Cape, except that applicant must not have been in prison without option of fine during last three years.	Sentence to imprisonment without option of fine within five years, unless a free pardon has been granted.

REGISTRATION.

It is not enough for a man to possess the above qualifications. In order to vote at an election he must prove that he possesses them. On the day of election this proof is to be offered in one form and one only. His name must appear on the official list of voters, that is, on the register of the electoral division in which he is entitled to vote. Indeed, so long as his name is on the register, he may vote whether he possesses the qualifications or not. The first step therefore in calling Parliament into existence is the compilation of the Register. As in the Cape the same register is used for elections to the Upper as well as the Lower House, there is only one Parliamentary register in each Colony. The work is done in the first instance by Field-cornets in the Cape Colony and Natal, and by persons appointed by the Governor for the purpose in the Transvaal and O.R.C. These officials act as Registering Officers, and frame provisional lists of voters for the Field-cornets or Wards into which the Electoral Division is divided. The lists are then forwarded to the Revising Officer of the Electoral Division or District, who as a rule is the Civil Commissioner or Magistrate. These officials settle appeals made either on behalf of persons not included, or against persons alleged to be wrongly included, in the Provisional List. The list as settled by the Revising Officer is final for two years, after which time a new register is made, except in Natal, where it is final for one year only, a practice which is said to have proved inconvenient. In Natal there are no party organisations, as in the other three Colonies, to watch and check the compilation of the register, which, as a result, is said to be in an unsatisfactory condition

XXXIV.—DISTRIBUTION OF VOTERS INTO CONSTITUENCIES.

XXXIV.—DISTRIBUTION OF VOTERS INTO CONSTITUENCIES.

(a) Cape Colony is divided into 46 Electoral Divisions. For elections to the Upper House the 46 divisions are grouped into nine constituencies or electoral provinces. There are 26 members to be elected to the Council by these nine constituencies. One constituency elects only one member, others as many as three or four. Where more than one member is to be elected for one constituency the voter may plump, that is, he may give more than one vote, or all the votes which he has, to one candidate. In consequence minorities who never obtain representation in the Lower House may sometimes obtain it in the Upper House by means of plumping.

(b) In the Cape Colony the 107 members of the Lower House are distributed over the 46 Electoral Divisions. There is no machinery for readjusting constituencies in the Cape on a footing of equality. They have never been so readjusted on any general principal since the country was first divided into Electoral Divisions in 1852. They have, however, been altered from time to time with a view to reducing inequalities, as when in 1904 additional members were given to a number of urban constituencies. This accounts for the disproportionate size of the Legislative Assembly, which is said to hamper the transaction of business. Where more than one member sits for one constituency no plumping is allowed.

Natal is divided into 17 Electoral Divisions, amongst which 43 members of the Lower House are distributed. No plumping is allowed. The remarks made with regard to the distribution of votes in the Cape apply to Natal.

The Transvaal.—In the Lower House in the Transvaal there are 69 constituencies, for each of which a single member is elected. The Magisterial Districts are divided into constituencies each containing an approximately equal number of voters. Every four years independent Commissioners are appointed by the Governor-in-Council to revise the constituencies and readjust them in such a manner as to secure that so far as possible each constituency contains an approximately equal number of voters. In doing this they may alter the number of members, but never in such a way as to exceed 75 or be less than the number existing at the date of revision.

The O.R.C. is divided into 38 constituencies. Certain of the smaller towns, which would otherwise be swamped by the country vote in their respective districts, are grouped together in such a way as to obtain representation; otherwise the provisions in respect of the distribution of voters are similar to those in the Transvaal.

ACT

To apply a Sum of Money for the Service of the Year ending the 30th June, 1905.

[Assented to 28th May, 1904.]

BE it enacted by the Governor of the Cape of Good Hope, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and House of Assembly thereof, as follows :—

Preamble.

1. The Public Revenue of the Colony is hereby charged towards the service of the year ending the 30th June, 1905, with a sum of Eight millions Eight hundred and Forty-six thousand Eight hundred and Thirty-seven pounds sterling.

Public Revenue to be charged with £8,846,837.

2. The money granted by this Act shall be applied to the purposes and services expressed in the Schedule annexed hereto, and more particularly specified and set forth in the Estimates and Supplementary Estimates of the Expenditure for the year ending 30th June, 1905, with the notes of such Estimates, submitted to and approved by Parliament.

How to be applied.

3. The said aids and supplies shall not be issued or applied to any use, intent or purpose other than the particular services to which the said amounts have been granted respectively by this Act, and the aforesaid Schedule, Estimates and Supplementary Estimates.

Not to be applied except as granted.

4. This Act may be cited for all purposes as "The Appropriation Act, 1904."

NOTE.—This work and the "Government of South Africa" are complementary to one another. While the latter aims at stating the facts of South African Government which must necessarily be considered in any scheme of reconstruction, the Framework of Union is designed to show what form political reconstruction has taken in other countries which have united on Federal lines. The book can be obtained through any bookstall of the Central News Agency or through any local bookseller.
